From Orlich's introduction: "Focusing almost exclusively on women characters, the 1926 novel addresses significant 1920s Romanian moral and social concerns. ...in direct response to the moral geography of the increasingly urbanized space... Bucharest, Romania's capital, is presented through the gendered lenses of a young female narrator named Mini... It presents a new society that subtly reformulates gender roles and offers a different model of manliness—domestically submissive to woman, sexually controlled and socially inept—and it inscribes a new sphere for woman."
