Dear Sir,

Yesterday I received your note of May 16th, with the enclosed cheque for my article.

I shall be glad to read in the next issue of the Contemporary the brief remarks you refer to.

With kind regards, believe me,

Yours Truly,

E. M. Brandt, F.[

Mr. Percy W[.] Bunting.

My dear Mr. Bunting,

By Friday’s evening post (registered) I returned to the address of Mr. Banton the proofs of my article on the Policy of Leo XIII. I dispatched also to the same address by the following post some additional and very important corrections, due to the fact of the change of title and paging in the anonymous article as sent me from England through Mr. Stillman and as published in the Contemporary. That change must have taken place at the last moment, so that no body thought of notifying me of it. To make sure that the corrections would be made I telegraphed yesterday to Mr. Banton informing him of the fact. I hope everything will arrive in due time and will be satisfactory both to you and to me.
I should be happy if as soon as published you will kindly send to my address four copies of the issue for May containing my paper.

With regards and best wishes, I remain

Yours truly,

C. M. Brandt Esq.

My dear Hunting,

I remember with sincere pleasure our talk in the garden
of the Reichskanzlei.

Will you kindly accept from me the latest Jahrbuch der Deutschen Shakespeare Gesellschaft? I hope you will find some remains of the book in the English press, though they go a little deeper than many addresses. The whole book may excite some interest in judging of Mr. Witten's Shakespeare performances, which I consider on of the most unwise speculations.

Therefore I have to lecture on Richard III, at Coops,
I shall remember and you need to me about thelegism.

Believe me, my dear Hunting,
yours sincerely

A. Brandt.

J.S.W. Tell you also, kindly accept a book by my eldest pupil, Reade or Shakespeare? Leave his saga. It will be sent to you directly by my publishers, Aly and Muller. If you have it mentioned in your reviews, it will be a great boon to the author, an able Somersetshire lad. O.K.

Dear Sir,

I have done my best to prepare an article founded on Mr. Matthews' 'Believing in the Gospel.' I shall have it in my hands this afternoon, and I will forward it to Mr. Matthews for revision. He will communicate with you as to any alterations which you may think desirable.

Monsieur,

Les nombreuses occupations dont je suis accablé m'ont empêché jusqu'à présent de répondre à votre amicale lettre et de vous remercier de vos termes flatteurs. Ces mêmes occupations me laissent pas le loisir, pour le moment du moins, de faire part à l'article que vous me demandez. C'est pourquoi, monsieur, je vous prie d'agréer toutes mes excuses et l'assurance de mes sentiments distingués.
