My dear Sir:

I have your letter and note your request for an article for the Contemporary Review on the issues of the campaign. While I should be glad to accommodate you, it is utterly impossible, in view of my engagements and my duties in the campaign, to take time for this purpose. You will therefore have to excuse me.

Very sincerely yours,

Dear Sir,

I am sorry to say that I cannot well comply with your request.

Now having expressed my thoughts in writing, I could hardly venture to begin doing so. for so distinguished a name as yours & one so vast a subject as the one you so kindly offer me.

Permit me to suggest to you as the most likely person to satisfy you our distinguished R.A. Lidwell & lectures on art

Dear Sir,

I am returning the M.S. in which I have made some slight alterations, so as to include a paragraph p. 24. on the Day Industrial School System, without lengthening the article. In America this system, which applies to towns rather than to country districts, has been worked extensively for over 25 years with convincing success. I have long been satisfied that it is the best and most economical, if not the only largely available mode of reaching the lowest and most neglected and difficult class of children. It is matter for congratulation that the public conscience and common sense, both in the House and out of it, are awakening to the claims of children as identified with the interests of the State.
I hope you may be able to find room for the article early in the Session. The Emigration of this class of children is also of great importance. I have worked on it personally, and am pleased that it is under the consideration of the Post.

but I thought it better not to weight the article with it.

I am,

Sincerely yours,

Mary C. Labor.
