Boston, Oct. 1, 1861.

Dear Sir:

The first number of the Liberator was published in this city, January 1, 1831, and has been regularly issued here ever since. For more than thirty years, therefore, it has advocated the ^{liberation} ~~cause~~ of the oppressed, as demanded by every precept of the Christian religion, every consideration of justice, every claim of humanity, as well as by a due regard for our national safety and prosperity. Had its appeals and warnings been heeded, and not treated with derision, no civil war would now be afflicting the land, but freedom and peace would have been the inheritance of all now living under the American flag.

Yours, to break every yoke,
Wm. Lloyd Garrison.

Frank A. Kilton.
