In True Gothic Setting

Irish Village ❖ World's Fair ❖ Chicago

- ¶ 420 years ago a monastery was erected in Bruges as a monument to the great works of Goddelieva.
- ¶ This monastery stood intact until destroyed by Zeppelin raids during the World War.
- ¶ The statues on display in the Irish Village, at the World's Fair, were salvaged from the decorations of this monastery.
- ¶ The combined efforts of the American and five foreign Ambassadors were necessary to promote the importation of this exhibit.
- ¶ These statues, standing over 6 feet in height, each carved from a single piece of wood, typify the style of sculpture in vogue during the 15th Century and are accredited by critics as marvels of inspired art.
- ¶ This is your one and last opportunity of seeing an exhibit of this nature.
