

11
From George E. Simons
General Electric Company
A Century of Progress
Chicago, Illinois

Radio

A home recording studio where visitors may stop to make records of their own voices, and a short wave reception studio are new features of the General Electric Company's exhibit at A Century of Progress this summer. The two studios are in the section of the exhibit devoted to radio receiving sets.

The records may be taken by visitors to be mailed as souvenir letters from the Fair, while the short wave reception set is of a type which would be satisfactory for home use by the short-wave radio bug.

(FCC)