I went to the Michigan Blue Hotel, a place in Detroit, Michigan.

I was assigned to room #327. I was taken to my room by a colored porter who asked me his name was Arthur. After going through a 15 ft. like, I asked him if he was the same officer that I had seen the previous night. He replied, "If it is a girl you want, I can get you one. We have many girls here. You don't know one for another." I said all right, and he took advantage of my ignorance. He said, "I will have a girl for you." I then left and went to St. R. at 12:30 on the 22nd St., and returned to the hotel at 1:35 A.M. Sunday morning. Some clerk and elevator man being in the lobby, I again entered into a conversation with Arthur the colored elevator man. Arthur said, "I have a girl all fixed up for you. She is in room #608. Somebody poetizing on a balcony above.

I was taken in by a girl whom I met standing on a corner of Madison and Elizabeth and who said her name was Marjorie.

Marjorie solicited me to stay drinking, and we wound around with some liquor.

Marjorie solicited me to contributions for the Sunday school fund for Drayton and said, "Don't you want to help in the work?" I said, "Of course, how much?"

She said, "For an old night job."

I only stayed with her all night and lived in a hotel on Riverside near Broadway.
