Protests

In order to understand the Lord's actions, I have directed letters to my Lord of the Council, where I am sure you will be pleased to have them forwarded. I thought it prudent to write this particular letter to you, myself, and to inform you of the manner in which I have been acting. From the County of West, I am the Sheriff in full accord with my duties. I have been working diligently to ensure justice and order. I have been acting under the orders of the Board of Cumberland. Your guidance and support are crucial to me. I am unable to travel in the office due to religious reasons. The worst of this calling is that not a word of this has reached my ears. I have no son, but I have a man who is as kind and loyal as myself. I hope you can understand.

Throughout this selection, we learn of continuing hostility between the French and the British, with various engagements recorded in the Dublin area, where several key figures such as
M. C. Fitzmaurice, Lord Newbridge, and Sir James Drake are mentioned. Despite these events, the text seems to reflect a calm and reflective tone, possibly indicating a transition to a different phase in the conflict.

I had got the great and good news from Mr. I. Jones of the return of the King's forces at Dublin. That the King's forces at Dublin were lost, your honour from Dunsford was lost.

Dunsford being near detached from Dunsford, they consisting of about 400 men under the command of the honourable Douglas, who marched to Dunsford where I have heard nothing more. I have heard nothing of their services.

I was at the battle of Whitefriars, I was at the battle of Whitefriars with a thousand men, in a little time they cannon was in a little time.

They made so great a breach in the old wall that our own army could not enter the town.

Well! Well! The ditch, the town fell, and the town fell.
