CHICAGO January 11th, 1901.

My dear Mrs. Dixson:

The University Extension Center at Princeton, Indiana, under the auspices of which Professor Troop is to deliver his course on Shakespeare's Heroines, desires very much a library. The lectures yet to be delivered in Princeton are the third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh listed on page nineteen of our Circular of Information under the head of "Shakespeare's Heroines." Inasmuch as Mr. Troop promised a library to the center and the officers in turn made a similar promise to the members of the center, I think it best that we endeavor to supply it. Will you therefore kindly secure at the earliest date, five or six copies of some cheap edition of these plays and forward them, with some of the books of criticism on Shakespeare, to Supt. Charles N. Peak, Princeton, Ind.

Mr. Troop suggests the Temple Edition of the plays. Hudson or Rolfe would doubtless do equally as well. The important thing is that the books be secured in Chicago.

Yours very truly,

Dear Miss Dixson:

Your letter of inquiry, dated Jan. 10th, has not received the prompt attention which it deserved, owing to an unusual amount of work on hand at the time and since.

I have, indeed, received several inquiries from you concerning the traveling library, and they have been personally answered. Why you have not received at least some of them, I do not understand. I plastered the last envelope pretty well over with your name, Chicago University Library, Traveling Library, etc.

I will try again this fall, and if you do not receive this, I want you to let me

But I think they are about through now, and tomorrow I will go to the library, and if there is not much demanded for its further retention, will ship it to you at once and notify you of the fact.

Dear Mr. [Name],

These charges are for the cost of development of the work and to aid in making a copy of Cymbeline. I am returning it to you now as it is excess to my needs.

I note the decision regarding the proper method of using the financial statement which it can generate to further the purpose of the financial statement of the University of Chicago. I am sure this will work a good purpose.

To but if it is another way: I care the University for the picture comment which were given under the successive charge.
upon the recent developments of the work, and in other ways be of such use to you as he can.

I find the opinion somewhat widely spread that the University of Chicago is deriving from this work a surplus income which it can devote to other purposes. The financial statement of our work for the year 1896-97 may serve to correct this impression. The University expended nearly $40,000. for the various branches of the work which are carried on outside of the University, and which are known as University Extension. The total income from all departments of this work was $31,000. showing that the University expended nearly $9,000. a year more upon the work than it received in return.

To put it in another way: It cost the University for the lecture courses which were given under its auspices during the year nearly the sum of six lectures. It received
