I might sometimes when talking acknowledge that, but I shouldn't do it to a convict, and as for making the statement that I didn't care a damn whetruth in the statement at all. There is no cause for it. There was no con-thing. Now how long he remained from that line, I can't tell without going to the books. I never ordered any man strapped, whipped or clubbed, I have ordered them gagged, but never, in no case, in this prison, or in any other.

We studied about the effects of various chemicals on different species of animals. The data was recorded and analyzed. The results showed that some chemicals had a significant impact on the growth and survival rates of the animals. Further research is needed to understand the long-term effects of these chemicals. Overall, it was an interesting and informative study.

You said that Mr. Reed was correct in saying that you told him that the

of it?
Knew of his going into punishment.
But not of the whipping?
O, sir, nothing to do with the whipping. I have not got to the whipping yet.

Dripps in the afternoon, but the book will tell this story. I don't remember, I have sometimes for five six or eight men there, I can't remember every case. Doctor Dripps some time after that came up to my office from the solitary, and said that he was a little shaky or something—an expression of that sort—in Harris' case. I laughed and said, said I: "You have changes your mind two or three times and as has Mr. Rees." Said I: "What makes you think so?" "Well," said he, "since this last application I begin to think that he may not be insane." Said I: "What application?" "Why," said he, "this last one," said I: "What do you mean by the last one?" Says I: "This last punishment?" says he. "No," says Mr. Draper, "he has been whipped." "Why did you whip him?" "What do you mean?" "Why did you whip him?" "We have been whipped." "Who whipped him?" "We have whipped him. Well, I don't recollect all the conversation that occurred then, but I got up immediately and went down to the Solitary and asked Mr. Reed if he had whipped Harris or strapped him. He said he had. I think I asked him what he had strapped him with and he said a little strap something like this (indicating gap strap) I suppose it was a strap like one of here, (indicating gag strap).
I didn’t know, and I must confess that perhaps I didn’t do my duty to find out just what it was, but I had an impression that it was one of those straps, (indicating gag strap).
Did you have the remotest idea that it was such a thing as that, (indicating whip).
I had no idea about that at all. I asked him who orders him to strap him and he said Doctor Heine.
I said: “Very well, if it is Doctor Heine’s orders that you strap him, if it is medical treatment, I have nothing further to say at present.” Said I, “How much have you whipped him?” She said: “I whipped him this morning.”
and he said that he was ordered to whip him about every hour or two through the day, and that he had done so. I then asked Doctor Dripps if he saw the whipping and he said he did; I asked him if the man's back was in condition to need treatment and he said no. I also asked Mr. Reed the same question. I told him if it was to attend to the case that I had seen men whipped with the cats, where a man needed attention after he was whipped. He said that meant this kind of a case. That the skin was not broken and there was no injury whatever, and that he needed no treatment, and that his clothes would not stick to him, or anything of that port. That is as near as I can recall the conversation. I had a talk with Harris at that time and he talked very rational, in fact better than I had ever known him to talk before and he promised if I would let him out, that he would go to work and behave himself. I reminded him that he had made that promise several times, that he had been put up clean, given a clean bed and a clean room, that he had destroyed the bedding and destroyed his clothing and dirtied the room up and that he had got sick, and he tells me that he had lies to me. I asked him why he lied. Well, he said, "The devil lied," said I, "The devil has nothing to do
