FAREWELL SONG.

By J. T. Sunderland.

No sky so fair, but, soon or late,
Across it comes a cloud,
No form so lovely or so young,
But it shall wear a shroud;
The flowers the last time drink the dew,
The birds their last songs trill,
Each sea wave finds at last the shore,
All sounds at last grow still.

And so, as we have laughed to-day,
Each heart hath checked a sigh—
For the rippling stream of college life
To-morrow shall run dry.
Nor is it weak if eyes be moist;
We well can pardon tears—
For, boys, 'tis hard to gather round
The grave of college years.

Dear flowers culled from memory's fields,
To-day we hither bring:
Dear songs we've sung in days gone by,
We've met to-day to sing.
The fragrance of these precious flowers
Shall float o'er years to come,
Nor echoes of these joyous songs
For many years be dumb.

But now the time has come, dear boys,
Our farewells must be said;
Farewell, our Alma Mater dear—
God's blessings on thy head.
And farewell you, ye honored band,
Instructors kind and true;
Farewell, farewell, glad college days,
Dear class-mates, farewell you.

And now the world's before us, boys,
Each goes his different way;
Oh, do your life-work bravely, boys,
And don't forget to-day.
And when at last we're dead, dear boys,
God grant that, up in heaven,
Not one of all shall absent be
From the Class of Sixty-Seven.
