Auburn, August 26th, 1837.

Gentleman,

I have been detained nearly the whole summer in a trip of some importance at Detroit. The letter which you addressed to me at the place you were to arrive at Dana the purpose to be gone to my second most esteem friend the Archbishop, if you did not find me at Detroit until after the day apportioned for the festival, amongst as my reply could not reach you in season, I was it might be further delayed without discovery until I should obtain a suitable from the absenting duties in which I was engaged.

Gentleman, I pray you now to be assured that I am sincerely grateful for the consideration shown by the invitation, and to be assured that a long and intimate personal acquaintance will the distinguished Prelate whom you have honored has only served to heighten the reverence and admiration which his public ecclesiastical character early inspired, that the Church, on which he presides, and the Country which he serves may long continue to enjoy the benefits of his humane and enlightened ministry in the favor and of the friends, and your humble servant.

William W. Stewart.
