Joseph H. Burwell,

My dear Sir,

I wish you would put Leaders' Gazette before the President, and get him to read about the affairs. Our key contributor is the Governor of Virginia, one of the best men of the State. He was selected to write, by the Union men of that section, and is their Representative in the absence of a loyal people of their own. They adopted this mode of discussing matters, and from our rapidly increasing circulation I have some means of judging of this growth of true loyalty in the State. The Union men stand the blows delivered. They are men for the contest, and I would be happy to see cause there.

I am in receipt of your letter dated [illegible].

I have been trying to find the address you mentioned.

If you have any further information, please let me know.

Thank you for your assistance.

Sincerely,

to have any change made in Remett's chart. — Brandeis, good line... I am going over with Gustave, Berntsen and the rest of them to the Copenbender... This is all right. The party will be the sooner and stronger without them. But the President must stand firm or all will be lost.
