Concluded

Only Mr. Roosevelt could have thought that the dinner table of the White House was for the Negro.

But when the representative of the whole people of the United States, who has a Negro dine at the White House, the significance of his act is greatly changed.

In the one instance he expresses individual taste and judgment and in the same he commits a whole nation to belief in social recognition of the Negro.

Social equality of the Negro.

Social recognition of the Negro would eventually result in miscegenation from which he recoils.
...Continued

The men of the North can never have felt the negro problem to be a real one since he was only an occasional negro and not one of the better type.

It fails to feel the real vital problem.

It can not be that any student of history and ethnology, or Anglo-Saxon tradition, can be neutral to such a solution of the race problem in the United States.

The effect of this unhoped for and spontaneous act on the part of Mr. Roosevelt will be to make the Southern people withdraw from him.
Corrected:

The man of the Harlem can never have felt the negro problem to be a real one, since he has only an occasional exposure to one of the better types.

In fact, to feel the racial problem,

It can not be denied that the kind of Negroes as we have seen fail in industry and education, Negroes of more
'religious' and honest men would protest to such a situation if the race problem in the United States.

Errors in Theme 11 continued

The criticisms may amount to nothing, in which case he would, and under the bread,

Mr. Washington himself has considerably lost in the incident.

One would even think his good angel must have been sleeping.

Private individuals and colleges in America might be free to launch upon the task recognizing and such honors as they would; and only the promise was kept.
This act justifies the misgivings of many, when Mr. Roosevelt was placed in the position of possible President, misgivings which he should be wanting in the judicial compartment inclined in the President of the United States.

All laws of American institutions were unified in the presence of a common, correct enemy. Any disposition to destroy Mr. Roosevelt, because of his Infatuous nature was naively,

Although she had not for many years been one of her type in the Executive Mansion, at least now she could claim the President as half her own.

Pious and just child of the negro race.
Errors in Theme II Continued

Only Mr. Roosevelt could have thought that the dinner table of the White House was the time and place.

But when the representatives of the white people of the United States, hear a negro drone at the White House, the significance of the act is greatly changed.

In this instance, he expresses individual thought and judgment and in this sense he amounts to a whole {paragraph}

Negro social equality -

Social recognition of the negro must initiate in misconception a thought from which he recedes