Dear Member:

If your son or your neighbor's son is entering college next fall, we hope you will bring to his consideration the four-year collegiate course offered by the Institute of Meat Packing, which is administered by the University of Chicago and the Institute of American Meat Packers in co-operation. An announcement of the four-year, full-time, residence curriculum, accompanied by an explanatory memorandum from the Committee on Educational Plans, is enclosed.

Very truly yours,

A MEMORANDUM ON THE FOUR-YEAR RESIDENCE COURSES
OFFERED IN THE INSTITUTE OF MEAT PACKING

By

The Committee on Educational Plans, Institute Plan Commission,
Oscar G. Mayer, Chairman.

The purposes of the four-year curriculum include these:

1. To give the student some general collegiate education;

2. To give the student some instruction in the general principles underlying all business;

3. To give the student some instruction in the principles underlying the fundamental phases of the meat packing business.

These points need to be noted carefully:

1. The Institute of Meat Packing will not pretend to turn out finished products. Its graduates will start in the industry as intelligent beginners.

2. No student in the Institute of Meat Packing will receive his degree until he has been actually employed in the packing industry for a period equivalent to six months of regular employment. Details of this requirement will be found on page 11 of the Announcement.

3. The present Announcement deals with only one of the two curricula that will be offered. At some future date, the second curriculum, designed for scientists in the packing industry, will be announced.

Training

The enclosure is Bulletin No. 3. Bulletin No. 2 dealt with the correspondence courses; Bulletin No. 1 dealt with the evening courses and the general plan for the Institute of Meat Packing.

Other points which everyone interested will wish to note in examining the four-year curriculum (page 12) offered by the Institute of Meat Packing, include these:

1. The courses of the first three years are similar to those which a student would receive if he went to any university offering a four-year course in its college of commerce.
2. The first two years contain some courses similar to those the student would take if he went to any university and entered its college of liberal arts.

3. (a) The required courses of the third year are concentrated on subjects especially useful in business and industry, and are not similar to those a student would take in his third year if he were taking the liberal arts curriculum.

(b) The required courses of the third year tend to fit a man for beginning work in any industry almost as much as for beginning work in the packing industry.

4. The required courses of the fourth year are specialized -- that is, they apply directly to the packing industry, -- and any student who at the end of the third year has changed his mind and has decided that after all he will not enter the packing industry, would make a mistake to take the fourth year.

5. When the residence courses begin next fall, students will be admitted to the first three years of the curriculum. Some courses of the fourth year will be available, but no students will be graduated by the Institute of Meat Packing in the session that begins October 1. Advanced standing will be given men who have successfully taken work in colleges of liberal arts or commerce in other universities. Thus, a man who has completed his freshman or sophomore year at another institution may enter the sophomore or junior year in the Institute of Meat Packing, provided his qualifications are accepted.

6. No students will be graduated from the Institute of Meat Packing until the summer of 1925.

The Institute of Meat Packing is administered by a joint administrative committee, made up of representatives of the University of Chicago and representatives of the Institute of American Meat Packers. In this way the teaching experience of a great educational institution and the business experience of a great industry are combined. The result should be a real contribution to the American meat packing industry and, through it, to the general social structure.

Chairman.

ADDENDUM

How Members Can Help

Here are some ways in which members can help the Institute of Meat Packing be of greater service to the industry:

1. Give the Institute of American Meat Packers the names of any young men of your acquaintance, intending to enter college next fall, who might be interested in the four-year course offered by the Institute of Meat Packing.

2. Give the Institute of American Meat Packers the names of young men who have completed their freshman year, or sophomore year, at college, and who might be interested in transferring to the third year of the Institute of Meat Packing next fall.

3. Bring the Institute of Meat Packing and the courses it offers to the attention of the superintendent of schools in your city and to the principals of representative high schools, so that they may be informed. Additional copies of the Announcement will be sent to you (or to them) if you so desire.

4. Packers who are especially interested in seeing some of the promising young men in their vicinity turn their interest toward the meat packing business, may wish to establish in the leading high school of their city one or more scholarships in the Institute of Meat Packing, bearing their names and made available to graduates showing conspicuous achievements.

My dear Dr. Slosson:

I have your letter of July 18 relating to our Institute of Meat Packing. I have just returned from vacation and have not yet had time to look up in Science the announcement to which you refer. I may say, however, that the Institute of Meat Packing has two aspects. On the one hand there is the educational aspect, in which it is a somewhat specialized line of work in our College of Commerce and Administration. On the other hand there is the more definitely scientific aspect, which has not as yet been fully organized but which we believe offers considerable possibility for the future. This second aspect is I think not just yet at the stage for the most advantageous publicity. On the other hand we are very glad to know of your interest in the subject, and I should like to refer you especially to Mr. H. J. Smith, who has been recently appointed by the University to have general charge of all matters of publicity. Mr. Smith has been for some years connected with the Chicago Daily News, and on the other hand is an alumnus of the University who is entirely in sympathy with the desire of our scientific staff for conservative presentation of scientific material. I am referring your letter to him for further comments.

Cordially yours,

James H. Tufts

Dear Philip:

Within the period of the Convention, one day (October 22) will be devoted to a Public Discussion of Education and Industry under the joint auspices of the University of Chicago and the Institute of American Meat Packers.

The proceedings, which will be dedicatory of the Institute of Meat Packing, will be of such a character as will make a real contribution toward helping both the packers and the public to appreciate the size, the dignity (deserved but not yet fully achieved) and the service of our industry.

Through the combined acquaintanceship and influence of the University and the Institute membership, it is hoped that the active participants will include the leaders in education, agriculture, industry, trade and finance, home and abroad.

At one session, account will be given of the current state of each of the major industries. For example, we hope to get E. H. Gary to talk on the iron and steel industries; J. J. Carty on the electric industries; Daniel Willard on the transportation industries and John D. Rockefeller, Jr. on the fuel industries. This session will be held in the Auditorium Theatre, and we expect 3600 auditors to be present in person. It probably will be broadcast to hundreds of thousands of others. Admission will be carefully controlled.
Before the formal invitations are issued, we should like for the men whom we propose to invite to get a viewpoint on the occasion, on its significance and on the importance of the co-operating institutions. We should like for them to receive from their friends intimations that they are to be invited and advice that they do not let slip this great opportunity to present a viewpoint to a world public.

Your assistance in bringing this about will be greatly appreciated. I should like especially to request your help in the case of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

Mr. Rockefeller, according to common impression, has been guided in his public relationships by Ivy Lee. I understand you are well acquainted with Mr. Lee. If you can do so consistently and agreeably to your own viewpoint, it should help tremendously if Mr. Lee could know now what is afoot, could know that you have a keen personal interest in the matter, and could be asked to see Mr. Rockefeller promptly and urge his acceptance of the invitation when it shall have been received.

Will you please let me know whether it is your pleasure to take such steps and any other you deem wise in this connection? If we may have your co-operation in this matter, we shall delay our invitation until your good offices shall have had an opportunity to make themselves felt.

Mr. Medill McCormick,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

My dear Senator:

The University of Chicago and the Institute of American Meat Packers, representing the largest industry in America, are holding a Public Conference on Education and Industry, at Chicago, October 22, 1924, in connection with the dedication of the Institute of Meat Packing, a new educational and research unit of the University.

Leaders in education, trade, finance and industry, home and abroad, will participate. The purpose of the conference is constructive in a popular, non-partisan sense. I enclose for your confidential information a tentative copy of our proposed programme. You will agree, I think, that no conference of this precise sort ever has been held before, and that it should make a contribution to current social thought. Account will be given of each major industry and of the major factors common to all industries.

It is in connection with this second aspect that we wish to have MacDonald discuss labor; Snowden, finance; Webb, trade, and Poincare, the status of international relations. All of these men have special familiarity with these subjects.

Even members of a Labor Cabinet, however, are influenced by precedent if they be British or Continental. Consequently, before a formal invitation is issued, we should like very much for these four men to receive by cable from sources which they respect some informal intimation that the invitations will be forthcoming; that the University is one of the nation’s great research institutions and packing its largest industry; and that it is to be hoped they will not let pass this unusual opportunity to state a point of view to America and, through it, to a world audience.

If the President and the State Department could send a friendly cable to MacDonald making such representations, it would help greatly. If consistent with your pleasure and agreeable to your viewpoint, it also would help greatly if you would cable to Mr. Hughes and Mr. Mellon apprising them of this matter, expressing your interest in it and voicing the hope that they may find it consistent to urge on MacDonald and the others favorable consideration of the invitation that will be forthcoming.

Your good offices in this matter would be greatly appreciated. It means a great deal to our industry to have these men present.

Please let us know the cost of any cables sent so that re-imbursement may be made.
