Chicago, October 30, 1915.

Dear Sir:

Will it not be possible for you to call your students together on November 8th, at the chapel hour or at such other time as may be convenient, for the purpose of endorsing the resolution submitted in Enclosure III?

Thank you in advance for your cooperation in this matter.

Very sincerely yours,

Louis P. Lochner
Secretary.

Dear Sir:

Will it be possible for you to call your students together on November 6th at the proper hour or at some other time as may be convenient for the purpose of enrolling the members subscribed to your organization?

Thank you in advance for your co-operation in this matter.

Very sincerely yours,

DO NOT WASTE THIS MATERIAL. IF YOU CANNOT ACT, HAND IT TO SOMEONE WHO WILL.

I.

WHAT TO DO.

(1) Find out what organizations in your city will hold meetings on November 8.

Get some live member in each to see to it that a place is somehow provided on the program for the passage of the Resolution (Enclosure III) and for as much of the program below (Enclosure II) as may be practicable.

It may be an unusual request in the case of many organizations, but precedent should not be a bar to action while the greatest tragedy in history is being enacted.

(2) If yours is a factory town or an industrial center, have the working men and women during the noon hour, or at any other time convenient, called together and present the Resolution (Enclosure III) to them. If time permits, have the Manifesto (Enclosure V) read to them. They are for peace and will demonstrate it by their action.

(3) Arrange for a citizens' mass meeting and challenge your city to action. Every decent citizen wants this carnage to stop ere the white race is annihilated. For material suitable for a mass meeting, see Enclosures III, V, VI, VIII, IX, XI, XII. Also see such articles on "The War Buzzard" in the American Magazine for November and "On the Battlefield" in The Public for September 17.

(4) See to it that the editors of the papers in your city receive a copy of "The Case for Continuous Neutral Mediation" (Enclosure VII). Ask them after reading it to write an editorial endorsing the idea. Also show them the other enclosures, notably III, V, VIII, IX, XI, and XII, for such use as they can make of them.

(5) Enclosed are two newspaper stories (Enclosure X). Send the first one to your editors immediately with a request for publication, and the second shortly before the day of the meeting. Also furnish them with photographs of your speakers, and with advance copies of their speeches.

(6) Get as many fellow citizens as possible to wire individually to President Wilson, besides having organizations telegraph him.

(7) Write the Chicago office at the earliest opportunity, stating what action was taken in your city.

(8) Don't hesitate to write for additional material for information to the central office at Chicago.

Address:

The National Peace Federation,
116 South Michigan Avenue,
Chicago, Ill.

WHAT TO DO

1. Find out what organizations in your city will have meetings on national defense.
2. Get some time member in each to see if it is a place to come.
3. If time permits, have the meetings. Be sure to mention the issue of the week.
4. Attend for a weekend, and don't forget to mention the issue of the week.
5. Make sure your city has a meeting, and bring the issue of the week.
6. Write the National Peace Federation.
7. Write the nearest office of the National Peace Federation.

THE PROGRAM.

If a special meeting is called for the express purpose of passing the Resolution, a program somewhat like the following is suggested:

1. Reading of the Manifesto (Enclosure V).
2. Address along the general lines suggested in Enclosure VI.
3. If there is time, reading of some of the other enclosures, (XI and XII), or, if preferred, these enclosures, together with the text of the Resolution (Enclosure III), may be reprinted and given to everyone in the audience.
4. Voluntary offering for a fund to continue a vigorous campaign of action in favor of an early peace based on justice and not on military advantage.

Contributions should be sent to The National Peace Federation, 116 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago.

5. Reading of the Resolution, with Motion to adopt it and to telegraph its contents to President Wilson (Enclosure IV).
IF YOU CANNOT ACT IN THE MATTER, PLEASE BE SURE TO HAND THIS MATERIAL TO SOMEONE WHO WILL.

THE PROGRAM

If a special meeting is called for the express purpose of proceeding
the Resolution, a program somewhat like the following is suggested:

1) Reading of the Minutes (Resolution V)

2) Address from the President, from Success in Endeavor IV

3) If/there be time, reading of some of the other endorsements

XIII and XIX, or, if preferred, these endorsements, together with the text of the Resolution (Paragraph III), may be repeated and given to every one in the audience.

4) Voluntary offering for a fund to continue a vigorous campaign of action in favor of an early peace press on Justice and not on military advantage.

Contributions should be sent to the National Peace Federation,

THE RESOLUTION.

(This resolution should be submitted to every newspaper in the city and to the representatives of the Associated Press for publication immediately after its passage.)

The outcome of recent missions to the governments of the warring nations warrants the belief that, while the nations at war are not willing themselves to begin negotiations or even signify a desire to do so, lest it be interpreted as a sign of weakness and place them at a disadvantage in the final peace settlement, there is nevertheless abundant evidence that those charged with the administration of the foreign policies of these nations would welcome, or at least not oppose, affirmative action by a neutral agency to bring about a peace based on international justice.

This meeting therefore respectfully urges the President of the United States to co-operate with other neutral governments in calling a conference of neutral nations, which would constitute a voluntary court of continuous mediation, would invite suggestions for settlement from each of the warring nations, and in any case submit simultaneously to all of them reasonable proposals as a basis for peace.

THE RESOLUTION

This resolution should be submitted to every newspaper in the city and to the representatives of the Association Press for publication immediately after its passage.

The outcome of recent missions to the governments of the united nations witness to the need that peace, while the nations of the earth face the threat of aggression at every moment, is a matter of grave importance in the face of peace settlement. There is no more appropriate evidence that peace cannot be accomplished with the administration of the foreign policy of these nations would welcome a rejection of this principle on the part of any people who seek a peace based on International Justice.

This meeting therefore requests that the President of the United States to co-operate with other neutral governments in calling a conference of neutral nations which would constitute a voluntary court of continuous mediation. Furthermore, the United Nations should meet at least twice a year to consult with representatives of these nations on matters of common concern.

THE MANIFESTO

Issued by Envoys of the International Congress of Women at the Hague to the Governments of Europe, and the President of the United States

Here in America, on neutral soil, far removed from the stress of the conflict we urge, envoys to the Governments from the International Congress of Women at the Hague, have come together to canvass the results of our mission and put forth this statement as our united and deliberate conclusions.

At a time when the foreign offices of the great belligerents have been barred to each other, and the public mind of Europe has been fixed on the war offices for leadership, we have gone from capital to capital and conferred with the civil governments.

Our mission was to place before belligerent and neutral alike the resolutions of the International Congress of Women held at the Hague in April; especially to place before them the definite method of a conference of neutral nations as an agency of continuous mediation for the settlement of the war.

To carry out this mission two delegations were appointed, which included women of Great Britain, Hungary, Italy, the Netherlands, Sweden, and the United States.

One or other of these delegations was received by the governments in fourteen capitals—Berlin, Berna, Budapest, Christianna, Copenhagen, Hague, Havre (Belgian Government), London, Paris, Petrograd, Rome, Stockholm, Vienna, and Washington. We were received by the Prime Ministers and Foreign Ministers of the Powers, by the King of Norway, by the Presidents of Switzerland and of the United States, by the Pope and the Cardinal Secretary of State. In many capitals more than one audience was given, not merely to present our resolutions, but for a thorough discussion. In addition to the thirty-five governmental visits we met—everywhere—for the leaders of public opinion.

We heard much the same words spoken in Downing Street as those spoken in Wilhelmstrasse, in Vienna as in Petrograd, in Budapest as in the Havre, where the Belgians have their temporary government.

Our visits to the war capitals convinced us that the belligerent Governments would not be opposed to a conference of neutral nations; that while the belligerents have rejected offers of mediation by single neutral nations, and while no belligerent could ask for mediation, the creation of a continuous conference of neutral nations might provide the machinery which would lead to peace. We found that the neutrals on the other hand were concerned lest calling such a conference might be considered inopportune by one or other of the belligerents.

Here is our information from the belligerents themselves that such initiatives would not be resented. "My country would not find anything unfriendly in such action by the neutrals," was the assurance given us by the foreign Minister of one of the great belligerents. "My Government would place no obstacle in the way of its interests," said the Minister of another.

"We are the neutrals waiting for," said a third, whose name ranks high not only in his own country, but across the world.

It remained for this clarifying intelligence before the Governments. As a result the plan of starting mediation through the agency of a continuous conference of neutral nations is today being seriously discussed alike in the Cabinets of the belligerent and neutral countries of Europe and in the press of the world.

We are in a position to quote some of the expressions of men high in the councils of the great nations as to the feasibility of the plan. "You are right," said one Minister, "that it would be of the greatest importance to finish the fight by early negotiation rather than by further military efforts, which would result in more and more destruction and irreparable loss." "I am one of the most earnestly disposed to this office in the last six months," said the Prime Minister of one of the larger countries.

We were also in position to canvass the objections that have been made to the proposal, testing it out severely in the judgment of those in the midst of the European conflict. It has been argued that it is not the time to present such a process of negotiation and that no step should be taken until one or other party has a victory, or at least until some new military balance is struck. The answer we bring is that every delay makes more difficult the beginning of negotiations. More nations become involved, and the situation becomes more complicated; that when at times in the course of the war such a balance was struck, the neutrals became irreparable to act. The opportunity passed. For the forces of peace to be unprepared when the hour comes to be as irremovable as for a military leader to be unprepared.

It has been argued that for such a conference to be called at any time when one side has met with some military advantage, would be to favor that side. The answer we bring is that the proposed conference would start mediation at a higher level than that of military advantage. As to the actual military situation, however, we quote a remark made by a foreign Minister of one of the belligerent Powers. "Neither side is to-day strong enough to dictate terms, and neither side is so weakened that it has to accept humiliating terms."

It has been suggested that such a conference would bind the neutral governments cooperating in it. The answer we bring is that, as proposed, such a conference should consist of the ablest persons of the neutral countries, assigned not to problems of their own governments, but to the common service of a supreme crisis. The situation calls for a conference cast in a new and larger mould than that of conventional diplomacy, the governments sending to it persons drawn from social, economic, and scientific fields who have had genuine international experience.

As women, it was possible for us, from belligerent and neutral nations alike, to meet in the midst of war and to carry forward an interchange of question and answer between capitals which were barred to each other. It is now our duty to make articulate our convictions. We have been convinced that the governments of the belligerent nations would not be hostile to the institution of such a common channel for good offices, and that the governments of the European neutrals we visited stand ready to cooperate with others in mediation. Reviewing the situation, we believe that the five European neutral nations visited, three are ready to join in such a conference, and that two are deliberating the calling of such a conference. Of the intentions of the United States we have as yet no evidence.

We are the conveyors of evidence which is a challenge to action by the neutral governments visited—by Denmark, Holland, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, and the United States. We in turn bear evidence of a rising desire and intention of vast companies of people in the neutral countries to turn a barren disinterestedness into an active good will. In Sweden, for example, more than 400 meetings were held in one day in different parts of the country, calling on the government to act.

The exculpatory burden of responsibility for the hopeless continuance of this war no longer rests on the will of the belligerent nations alone. It rests also on the will of those neutral governments and people who have been spared its shock but cannot, if they would, absolve themselves from their full share of responsibility for the continuance of the war.

THE MANIFESTO

Issued by Envoys of the International Congress of Women at the Hague

In the name of the women of the world, in the name of women everywhere, we are gathered here today to proclaim our manifest. We come from every corner of the globe, from every continent, from every nation. We come to speak for ourselves, to speak for our sisters, to speak for the future.

We are united in our determination to create a world where women are valued, respected, and equal. We are united in our commitment to fighting for our rights, our freedoms, and our dignity.

We are united in our belief that women are not only capable of, but necessary to, leading our world. We are united in our belief that women's leadership will bring about a better, more just, more equitable world.

We are united in our demand for equal pay, equal opportunities, and equal rights. We are united in our demand for an end to violence against women and girls.

We are united in our determination to work together, to support each other, to create a world where we can all flourish.

We stand together, as women, as sisters, as equals. We stand together, as a force for change. We stand together, as the Manifesto.

In the name of the women of the world, we declare:

1. Our right to be heard, to be respected, to be valued.
2. Our right to equal opportunities, to equal pay, to equal rights.
3. Our right to be free from violence.
4. Our right to lead, to govern, to create.

In the name of the women of the world, we stand together, united.

The Manifesto.

Points for an address.

(The suggestions presuppose the reading of the Manifesto.)

Fellow Citizens:
For over a year the greatest calamity in history has run its unchecked course. Millions of human lives already wiped out, millions of men wounded or diseased; millions of their buildings, industries, commerce in ruins; costs aggregating nineteen billion dollars, and commercial losses of eleven billion dollars—this, as a conservative estimate, is the present toll of the war. It seems to our non-combatants, the widows and orphans, the aged and infirm; for the hunger, disease, privation and suffering of millions of innocents not even in the war zone.

In the face of such a tragedy, shall we rest content to say that nothing can be done? If a method can be devised by which the war can be ended by but one day, is there a person in this audience who would not gladly make a supreme sacrifice to accomplish that worthy end? This is the way. We are gathered today to register our approval, and to express that approval to the executive head of this nation, of a plan that only promises to hasten the end of the conflict, but that will also make it possible to conclude a peace based upon international justice rather than upon military advantage.

Let us for a moment review the European situation in the light of the testimony of those who have had the opportunity to study conditions at first hand. Practically all of the so-called observers of European situation agree that the old orthodox method of mediation, by which a neutral government says in effect to the belligerents, “As soon as either of you is ready to quit, just tell us, and we’ll be glad to act as go-between of your disinterested friend,” is inadequate to cope with as stupendous a situation as confronts the world today. A sweeping victory on either side, even if attainable, would not contribute to the solution of the problems of Europe, being sure to leave an increasing legacy of hate with the seeds of future wars.

It is clear, then, that the first steps looking toward an approach to the settlement must come from some neutral agency, unless indeed the struggle is to continue indeﬁnitely and the white race face virtual annihilation. What is more, such an agency must be neutral in the strictest sense of the word. It is quite impossible to believe that any of you, or any of those who have recently been in the warring governments of Europe, every one having his own ends in mind, would again the testimony of those who have been in the warring governments of Europe. Every one having his own ends in mind, would again the testimony of those who have been in the warring governments of Europe. Every one having his own ends in mind, would again the testimony of those who have been in the warring governments of Europe. Every one having his own ends in mind, would again the testimony of those who have been in the warring governments of Europe. Every one having his own ends in mind, would again the testimony of those who have been in the warring governments of Europe.

The question of whether or not the warring nations that would not be glad to receive such service. Now that came to us unequivocally.

What shall this neutral agency be that shall make the first approach to the complicated situation abroad? Far too little have we as Americans concerned ourselves with this thought. We have rested content to thank God and the President that this nation has kept out of war. We forget that the倘有情形之上, our extraordinary responsibilities; that our nation, because of its numerical population, its size and its geographical isolation, is under obligation to all nations to face this question seriously. We forget that these neutral countries of Northern and Western Europe are putting conditions for that not only standing out of the war under conditions far more trying than those confronting our nation, but by adding to the collective thoughts of the minds of our entire peoples upon the one method still left to end the war by negotiation rather than revolution—that of a conference of neutral nations.

In Holland, in Norway, in Sweden, in Denmark, in Switzerland, in all these splendid little states have the peoples and the governments faced squarely the issue that we are facing today. What can we do to save Europe from itself?—king and peasant alike have asked it. And from each of these countries has come the same answer: “Alone we are not influential enough to affect the situation decisively. This crisis calls for collective action. Like your President, our Government, too, has singly offered mediation, but the result has not been encouraging. No single nation, however powerful, can lift its voice above the din of battle.” And so each of them has intimated, nay, frankly pledged, that it would gladly co-operate with other neutrals, provided only the greatest and most essential of the neutrals, the United States, intimated its willingness to join in the move.

It comes, then, to this: The belligerent countries stand ready to accept collective action. The European neutrals are eager and ready to act; yet America alone keeps the world waiting by remaining apathetic. Do you realize what a tremendous burden of responsibility is thus thrown upon us? In an age in which all this would be our neighbor, shall we continue to stand aloof? Shall we fail to realize that when the time comes to hold our co-operation, so that a weakened and bankrupt Europe may assure our commercial and political supremacy, the conference does not meet with instant success.

Time is inexorable, and more and more the forces making for progress within the warring countries would rally to the support of the neutrals. For let us not forget that in each of the warring countries there are tremendous popular currents at work demanding an early peace. These have not been very cordial to us. Far, far, because there was no concrete proposal to which they could attach their attention, it was impossible for these currents to find free expression. But once such an international conference of neutrals was in session, these democratic currents could reassert themselves with renewed force. Yes, self-interest and economic necessity, if no other motives, would lead the belligerents at least to listen to the solutions proposed by such a conference.

Even supposing that the conference was made no impression whatever upon the warring governments, that its efforts to bring the belligerents together failed, still it would have tremendous value. For, even accepting for the moment the falacious theory of “a fight-to-the-finish” the war cannot go on forever, and sooner or later negotiations must take the place of military action. When these negotiations begin, we shall have been more ready than ever of wisdom and constructive statesmanship to prevent a settlement along the lines that will merely mean the perpetuation of the conditions that led to the present war. A constructive peace program worked out by the conference proposed could not but be of far-reaching influence upon the men assembled around the green table.

Reduced to its very lowest terms, the proposal which has come to endorse today could not do worse than fail of accomplishing its purpose. There is no honor even in failure. On the other hand, there is everything to be gained from it. Indeed, the evidence which you have heard demonstrates how ready conditions are for the success of the plan proposed. If collective right-thinking had any potency at all, the countless meetings which are being held simultaneously in all departments of constructive action are bound to set in motion a popular demand for a peace based on justice, that will prove irresistible and compelling.

Citizens of, as Americans and as men and women who desire the highest interests of humanity, let us by word and action contribute our share toward fulfilling the hopes of those millions of unfortunate human beings throughout the length and breadth of Europe who are waiting for America’s share. Let it not be said of us that we had ears and heard not; that we had eyes and saw not. Let us accept the challenge of our neutral sister nations across the waters, and unite with them immediately to approach a situation that becomes more difficult and complicated every day, yes, every hour. Before it is too late, let us act.
VII.

THE CASE FOR CONTINUOUS, NEUTRAL MEDIATION.

SCOPE OF WORK OF A CONFERENCE OF NEUTRAL NATIONS:

The work of the Conference should be to formulate concerted proposals of possible terms of peace as a basis for suggestions and objections on the part of the belligerent governments and for public discussion. In other words, it should frame the outline of a possible treaty to be submitted to the belligerent governments and to be publicly discussed in the different countries.

Further, on the basis of the suggestions and objections received from the belligerent governments, the Conference should modify the original proposals and submit them again to the belligerents in the modified form. It should in this way continuously develop the original proposals in the line of further suggestions and objections made by the belligerent governments, or arising out of the public discussion of the successive proposals in the different countries. It should continue in this way until the proposals have reached a point when the belligerents of both sides find in them sufficient common ground themselves to meet for the final settlement of the peace treaty.

THE NEED OF A SPECIAL METHOD:

This war is in every way unparalleled so that none of the methods applied to the settlement of previous wars are practicable. It is, therefore, of the utmost importance to the future peace of the whole world that the method of bringing about the settlement of the present war should be adapted to its peculiar circumstances. Such a method is this impartial neutral conference, which would work towards a settlement without waiting to be officially asked by the belligerents.
THE CASE FOR CONTINUOUS NEUTRAL MEDICATION

SCOPE OF WORK OF A CONFERENCE OF NEUTRAL NATIONS:

The work of the Conference should be to formulate conclusions and set up possible terms of peace as a basis for arrangements and agreements on the part of the different Governments and for propagating the cause of a possible mediation. In other words, it should frame the outline of a possible settlement for the different Governments and to be publicly accepted in the different countries.

Further, on the basis of the suggestions and propositions received from the different Governments, the Conference should modify the original proposals and submit them again to the different countries in the original form. It should in this way continuously develop the original proposals in the face of further suggestions and propositions made by the different Governments, and bring out of the public discussion of the different proposals in the different countries. It should conclude at an early stage the different proposals have received a point when the different countries of both sides have arrived at a common ground prepared to meet for the final settlement of the peace treaty.

THE NEED OF A SPECIAL METHOD:

This was not in every way unprecedented so that none of the methods applied to the settlement of previous wars are the precedent. It is therefore of the utmost importance to the future peace of the whole world that the method of principal accept the settlement of the peace mediation without waiting for official results of the different mediation.
WHY THE BELLIGERENTS CANNOT ACT:

It is useless to wait till one belligerent side asks for mediation, because however sick both sides may be of the war, they are too proud to accept mediation as commonly understood. None of the governments can afford as yet to go before its people with a virtual confession of defeat, such as would be implied in its official acceptance of mediation. The censored press in each of the belligerent countries leads each people to believe that victory is certain. Imagine, then, the popular outcry against any government that suddenly announced that it had told Uncle Sam or any other neutral that it was ready for a settlement!

It is clear, then, that the first steps looking toward an approach to a settlement must come from some neutral agency. Every day’s delay means loss, irreparable loss, not only to the belligerents but to the whole world. This method provides the machinery for taking the first step towards a settlement. It is for the neutrals to put it into motion.

WHY MEDIATION SHOULD COME FROM A NUMBER OF NEUTRALS ACTING JOINTLY:

The necessity of mediation by a group of governments, instead of by an individual government, is that, on the one hand, the group acting jointly would give confidence to the belligerents of both sides, and, on the other hand, would help to safeguard the neutrality of the individual government co-operating.

This is necessary because the sensitiveness of the belligerents might lead them to suppose that some of the neutrals might lean to one side and some to the other, so that the co-operation of a group would assure the belligerents of the disinterestedness of all the parties.
WHY THE PEACEFUL BARGAIN ACT:

It is necessary to make clear at the outset that the good will of both parties, and the interest of the international community, is essential for the success of the mediation. It is for this reason that the Peaceful Bargain Act is designed as a method to protect the rights of the people, with a view to the conclusion of a settlement.

The sequence of events is as follows: the official acceptance of the principle of mediation, the conclusion of a peace agreement, the implementation of the provisions of the agreement, and finally, the conclusion of a settlement. This sequence is necessary because the success of the mediation depends on the willingness of both parties to enter into negotiations and to work toward a settlement.

WHY MEDIATE SHOULDN'T COME FROM A NUMBER OF NEUTRAL ACTING JOINTLY:

The necessity of mediation by a group of governments is based on the principle of international law, and the role of the mediator is to ensure that the interests of all parties are protected. A joint mediator would give confidence to the parties to the agreement, and help to establish the neutrality of the mediator on the one hand, and avoid government co-operation on the other hand, to prevent the co-operation of a group of nations from interfering with the negotiations.

This is necessary because the neutrality of the mediator is essential to the success of the mediation. If a group of nations were to mediate, they might lean on one side or the other, which would undermine the effectiveness of the mediator.
POSSIBLE METHOD OF CALLING THE CONFERENCE:

In order to make a start in forming such a conference some neutral State must issue the invitation to other neutral States to the Conference. Certain European neutrals have already intimated a readiness to help and a wish to co-operate when effective action should be taken. Moreover, the Governments of the Netherlands and of Sweden are seriously considering the question of taking the initiative. Our information leads to the belief that the Conference could be more efficiently and quickly got together if one of the European neutrals were to convene a Conference of the Governments of Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, Switzerland, Spain and the United States of America.

The United States would probably find it difficult, if it took the initiative, to discriminate between the European neutrals and the South American Republics, with which it has so many close ties. The United States, however, would not be in the same difficult position in accepting the invitation of one of the European neutrals to join in a Conference with the European neutrals.

Were these European neutrals informed, officially or unofficially, that the United States would accept such an invitation it would be possible to set up the Conference in the near future. These smaller European neutrals would in this way be given the support which would make it possible for them to act.

NATURE OF THE CONFERENCE:

A confusion exists in the minds of some people as to the type of Conference proposed. Some have thought of it as a body like the Hague Conference, where the members voiced the opinions of their governments and in some sense committed their governments, while some have proposed a Conference of neutral nations whose business it would be to promote the interests of the neutral nations taking part.

It must be emphasized that it is essential to the success of the proposed Conference that its work should be restricted to the effort to settle the dispute between the warring peoples.
POSSIBLE METHOD OF CALLING THE CONFERENCE:

In order to make a start in forming such a conference some readiness must first be made. The States must issue the invitation or offer neutral states to the Conference. Certain European neutrals have already intimated a readiness to help and a wish to co-operate when effective action should be taken.

Moreover, if effective action were to be taken, the countries of the Neutrals and of Sweden, and of a number of neutral countries, would have to be considered in the United Nations. The United Nations, with which it is so many close ties, the United States, however, would not be in the same difficult position in respect of the invitation for the Conference of the United Nations, to join in a Conference with the European neutrals.

We have as far as possible, informally or officially, made it plain that the United States would accept such an invitation if made. These smaller European neutrals would in this way be given the support which would make it possible for them to set.

NATURE OF THE CONFERENCE:

A conference exists in the minds of some people as to the type of Conference proposed. Some have thought of it as a body like the League of Nations. The Conference would represent the opinions of their Governments and in some sense execute their Governments. Their purpose would be to propose a Conference of neutrals in which a number of neutrals would meet and take part. It must be supposed that as essential to the success of the proposed Conference that it work strongly to further the effort to settle the dispute between the warring peoples.
MEMBERS OF THE CONFERENCE AND THEIR POWERS.

The type of persons appointed should be of broad international outlook. They should not, once appointed, require to refer back to their governments, but should act on their own responsibility as do the Judges of the Hague Court of Arbitration, who are appointed by their governments, but who, once appointed, act on their own responsibility. The work of the Conference, however, would be different from that of the Hague Court of Arbitration which deals only with justiciable questions. The proposed Conference would more resemble an International Court of Conciliation and its work would be analogous to that of a Board of Conciliation mediating between employers and employed.

SPECIAL INFORMATION:

Those with special information regarding the problems involved, whether from neutral or belligerent countries, would be willing to give it to such a Conference of neutral governments.

BASIS OF A LASTING PEACE:

By this method of continuous mediation, in which the proposals would be initiated by an impartial body, we can hope to see established the peace based on the principles of freedom and justice for which all the belligerents in their official statements, whether to the public or to private individuals, declare themselves to be fighting.

These declarations on their part of a desire for a peace based on freedom and justice give to the neutral conference the opportunity to draft its proposals on the basis acknowledged by the belligerents to be fundamental.

WHY NOT FIGHT TO A FINISH?

Those who advocate the postponement of any action toward the application of these principles till the end of the war fail to realize that the terms of peace are being decided now in the secret bayoues being made between one or the other belligerent side and the neutrals who are being urged to enter the conflict.

To suggest the postponing of action till after a problematic decisive victory, whether on one side or the other, is to go back to the exploded idea that peace must be dictated by the victor to the defeated.
MEMBERS OF THE CONFERENCE AND THEIR POWERS

The type of personnel supported should be of a professional and technical nature. They should not be selected, recruited, or retained to work for government or any other organization that would require them to work in the interests of the United Nations. The work of the Conference, however, would be different. The work of the Conference, moreover, would be different.

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE IN OTHER NEUTRAL COUNTRIES.

SWEDEN:
On June 27, nearly 800 mass meetings throughout the Kingdom, with more than 100,000 people attending, urged their Government to co-operate in a neutral Conference.

HOLLAND:
On August 3, the Anti-Oorlog Raad (Anti-War Council) convened a national meeting at The Hague, at which hundreds of Dutch organizations were represented. The convention went on record in favor of a neutral Conference, and petitioned the Dutch Government accordingly.

SWITZERLAND:
Twenty-one organizations are now circulating a petition to encourage their Government to act with other neutrals.

As the result of all this agitation, "three of the European neutral countries are ready to join in such a conference, and two are deliberating the calling of it," as the envoys who personally visited the Governments were able to state.

WHAT HAS ALREADY BEEN DONE IN AMERICA.

The idea of a conference of neutrals has already received far more affirmative endorsement than is commonly supposed. But these endorsements have come spasmodically. Concerted, simultaneous action will rally such support around the President as will enable him to speak for a united America. In the following, a tabulation, by no means exhaustive, is made of significant endorsements:

ENDORSEMENTS BY POPULAR CONGRESSES, NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL.

International Congress of Women at The Hague, Holland, April 28 to May 1, 1915.

ENDORSEMENTS BY GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS.

The Governors of Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, North Dakota, Vermont, Wyoming.

United States Senators from California, Wisconsin, Wyoming.

A former Secretary of War and a former Assistant Secretary of War.

A former Secretary of State.

The United States Commissioner of Education.

The Chairman of the American Group of the Interparliamentary Union.

ENDORSEMENTS BY LEGISLATIVE BODIES.

The Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, in a Memorial to the President adopted in February, 1915.

In this connection, Senate Joint Resolution 234, introduced on February 8 by Senator LaFollette should also be mentioned. This resolution died in committee, but the discussions attending its introduction were highly significant.
WHAT HAS ALREADY BEEN DONE IN AMERICA

The idea of a conference of nations was already receiving the more affirmative endorsement than is commonly supposed. But these endorsements have come disproportionately concentrated in the universities and educational institutions. It will be up to us to make the nation aware of the implications of this movement and to work for a united America. In the following, a resolution, a petition, and endorsements, in a large number of significant states endorsements, by popular congresses, national and international.

ENDORSEMENTS BY POPULAR CONGRESSSES, NATIONAL AND

ENDORSEMENTS BY LEGISLATIVE BODIES.

The resolutions of the state of Wisconsin, in a Memorial to the President, adopted in February, 1925.

In this connection, Senate Joint Resolution 28, introduced on February 9 by Senator Pellatt, asking also be mentioned. The resolution, given in Committee, put the resolution at an important preliminary step.

MEETING TO URGE PRESIDENT TO JOIN NEUTRAL CONFERENCE.

Similar Meetings all over Nation.

Since the startling evidence of the deputations which have visited the belligerent and neutral governments of Europe has been put before the people of our country, a growing feeling of impatience by men and women over the delay of our country to act in the name of humanity has finally resulted in a nation-wide movement. Everywhere people are clamoring for an opportunity to assert their feelings, and are besieging the centers of organization to give advice as to what can be done to help Europe out of the trap into which it has fallen.

The organization of peace forces, the National Peace Federation, the President of which is Hamilton Holt of New York, Vice President Jane Addams of Chicago, and Secretary Louis P. Lochner of Chicago, will direct this national peace demonstration. On November 8, thousands of simultaneous meetings will be held all over the country, constituting an immense, gigantic appeal calling upon the President to lead the United States in fulfilling our solemn obligation. In our city the meeting will be held in............Hall. The speakers will be ...............................................................

..................................................Mr. Mrs. Miss.........................

will present a complete review of the situation and outline the exact duty of our country not only in keeping this nation out of the war, which in comparison with the same task of the European neutrals is very minor, but in directing Europe to the way out of the war.
MEETING TO URGE PRESIDENT TO JOIN NEUTRAL CONFERENCE

Since the startling evidence of the German plan to invade Europe has been published, the President and the neutral governments have taken measures to prevent the people of our country from engaging in any manner of international conflict. Everywhere the voice of the people is heard as a warning to keep their principles and to keep their peace. Everywhere the voice of the people is heard as a warning to keep their principles and to keep their peace.

The organization of peace forces, the National Peace Committee, will direct the national peace demonstration on November 8th. The speakers at the meeting will be held in the Hall of the United Nations. The speakers will include representatives of the various organizations and societies that are working for peace. The meeting will be a call to all people to work for peace and to keep the country out of war.

The meeting will be held in the Hall of the United Nations. The speakers will include representatives of the various organizations and societies that are working for peace. The meeting will be a call to all people to work for peace and to keep the country out of war.
NATION-WIDE DEMONSTRATION FOR IMMEDIATE PEACE.

Meetings Calling on Wilson to Act.

The occasional and sporadic peace demonstrations which are recurring with increasing frequency will culminate in a nation-wide movement for positive action on the eighth of November. Simultaneous meetings will be held on the same day and, if possible, at the same hour, in every city and hamlet wherever a group of people can meet. The demand that our country participate in an united effort with other neutral countries to begin the process of continuous mediation, has such strong backing by large numbers of people that America's sense of duty to help war-ridden Europe can no longer be suppressed.

The evidence gathered from the belligerent governments of Europe, together with the assurances that the neutral governments are ready for action as soon as our government expresses its readiness for cooperation, indicates that the only way to end the greatest war of all history is through the channels of a neutral conference. This places a heavy responsibility upon the United States.

The meeting to be held on the eighth of November in ............. at ........ o'clock, when ............... will speak, will demonstrate that our city feels this responsibility, regardless of whether we are pro-German or pro-Ally. This message coming from thousands of other meetings will be flashed over to Europe as a proof of our sympathy with all sufferers. The meeting will be open to the public free of charge. It is hardly necessary for the Committee to urge the people of ....... to be present, for action in this matter is not only the noblest duty for every human being to perform at this time, but the highest expression of our sincerity.

Meetings Calling on Wisdom to Act

The occasion, and opportunity, to express our determination to maintain peace, is inextricably linked with the events of November 8th. Simultaneous movement for positive action on the eighth of November, simultaneous meetings will be held in every city and town. It behooves each of us to participate in our community's efforts, to our best ability, to help our world be free of war. We are united in our determination to begin the process of continuing mediation, and in our shared belief that large numbers of people, everywhere, sense of duty to help our neighbors. Europe can no longer be suppressed. The evidence emerging from the different governments of Europe, together with the reassurances that the neutral governments have given, to us all, that the best way to end the current conflict is through the opening of a neutral conference. This process is the only reasonable solution. The meeting to be held on the eighth of November will be held at 10:00 o'clock. When we gather, we will demonstrate that our only desire is to be a part of the world's peaceful and democratic society. The message coming from strength of our committee will be passed to the people of other countries. It is formally necessary for the committee to note the people of the highest expression of our solidarity.
XI.

AN INDICTMENT.

By David Starr Jordan

Chancellor of Stanford University.

The Great War is bleeding Europe white. It is working havoc without parallel in the best racial elements in all nations concerned, thereby exhausting the near future and bringing subsequent impoverishment, physical and mental, to the race.

An intolerable burden of sorrow and misery is thrown on the women and children in the various nations — those who have no part in bringing on the war and no interests to be served by it.

No possible gain, economic or political (the integrity of invaded territory being assured), can compensate any nation for the loss, distress and misery involved in this war and aggravated by every day of its continuance.

No probability exists that military operations in any quarter, on land or sea, can of themselves bring the war to an end.

A sweeping victory on either side, even if attainable, would not contribute to the solution of the problems of Europe, being sure to leave an increasing legacy of hate with the seeds of future wars.

TO A FINISH.

By Senator Henri La Fontaine of Belgium

A fight to a finish! To the finish of what? Of militarism, will be the answer, but nobody reflects on the terrible sacrifices, the frightful massacres, the unheard-of ruin that this answer implies.

An end must be put to the young, the growing, and the adults in all the force of their experience and development. An end must be put to the savants, the thinkers, the highest intelligences, and the most brilliant artists. An end must be put to civilization, progress, inventions, and beauty. An end must be put to the age-long devotion of men in loving and trusting. An end must be put to shining prospects and splendid hopes. Under the impassive stars and the triumphant sun an end must be put to the human race. That is the real meaning of the fatalistic cry which is hypnotizing the world!

Indeed, if in the presence of the horrid spectacle of muddy trenches filled with putrefying corpses and wounded men awaiting tetanus and gangrene, humanity does not rise and shout, in an access of noble passion and clear vision, "Enough, enough!" it had better come to an end.

Better that the earth unencumbered with the dwellings of men, freed from the criminal multitudes who, thirsting for blood and murder, abuse it with their shells, delivered from the frightful cacophony of their war-cries, mingled with the deafening roar of cannons and the crackling of the mitrailleuses—better that the earth roll inert and verdant, inhabited by birds and filled with their songs, in the vast spaces restored to their eternal calm.
A light to a finish to the finish of war. Of miller and win.

By Senator Henry of Boston, I am sure, and the Terrible Secretary, the light of a missiles into the minds that this vision to me.

in must be put to the town, the country, and the insults in will be the voice of their experience and development. An may be most brilliant efforts, and the savants, the thinkers, the expert intellectuals, and the beauty and beauty. An may be put to the eyes, the view of men in labor and thrift. An may be put to mining progresses and developing. Under the impressive aspect and the triumph of the revolutionary with a proposition from the.

I think, in the presence of the portion desperate of man.

France with particular courage and successful men, with a process of humanity, humanity does not live and shrug, in an access of hope, passion, and clear vision. 'France, enough!' if and better come to an end.

Better that the earthpromed with the gunnies of men, please from the triumphant multitudes who, with the spirit of the and the revolution, mingled with the galvanic turn of commons and the organism of the multitudes—better that the earth turn right, and the vergant, impulsive, pursue and filling with great sense, in the next advice referring to their stellar stars.
