FAREWELL SONG, Tous.
Glass Song.

O, say, have you seen, at the dark billow's edge,
How it kisses the rocks, as it dashes on, foaming,
How it leaps up on high, how it dashes its spray.
And oft brings its danger to sailor-boy, roaming;
And the ocean's loud roar, as it beats on the shore,
Brings memory the conflict, the battle of yore.

Chorus.—Then roll, billows, roll! be unceasing your beat;
'By Alma praise, and her glories repeat.

O, say, have you seen, in the storm-cloud's dim light,
How the daring sea-bird meets the storm-billows' beating.
How it loves the loud strife in the perilous flight,
Remains their companion—ne'er parting, ne'er leaving.
And the lightning's red glare, and the thunder's loud roar
But deters him yet farther and higher to soar.

Thus have we now fought the first battle of life,
And the banner of victory now streams high above us;
How we love the hard toil and the still harder strife
Of the battle of thought wherein no power can remove us.
And Alma's dear name, as we ever the same,
Affection shall cherish, with honor its aim.

F. M. S.

Farewell Song.

The past has now given us her treasures immortal,
And bright dawns the future on youth's hopeful breast;
Let pause we to-day as we enter its portal,
And say we to all a farewell as we part.

In the shadows of evening, our college-work ended,
We will sing a last song, but fond memory will dwell
On this home, and the years that in brightness have blended,
And we say to each friend and each class-mate—farewell!

Yes, dear to us all are the scenes we are leaving;
Where sunlight and shadow have glanced on our way;
And all will be sacred in memory's weaving
The pleasures of past years—our parting to-day.

As we how to the duty now bidding us sever
Our union in toil that by hope is made bright,
Be "Iustus Amor" our motto forever,
And the clear ties of friendship our number unite.

CLASS SONG.

AIR—“Bruce’s Address.”

Comrades in a noble strive,
Comrades in a strife laborious,
Ye have battled long.
In the glow of youthful life
Now we hail this conflict ended;
Now let all, with voices blended,
Raise the triumph song.

O, the memories that come,
Like a band of bright immortals,
Throngs ‘round the closing portals
Of our college days!
Hearts grow full and lips grow dumb;—
Yet, whenever in our sadness
Comes this dear old home, with gladness
We’ll repeat its praise.
Alma Mater! on thy shrine
By Lake Michigan's blue waters,
Ever shall thy sons and daughters
Read a deathless name.
Classic be these walls of thine;
These blue waves before thee dashing,
Sweeter than Bandusia's plashing,
They shall tell thy fame.

Brothers! in a sterner strife,
In a conflict more laborious,
For a victory more glorious
We must battle long.
In the evening glow of life,
When we hail these conflicts ended,
May we all, with voices blended,
Sing a triumph song.

T. C. R.

FAREWELL SONG.

AIR—"Dearest Mae."

Come, classmates, sing a parting song to our old college home!
Our college days are ended now, and we afar must roam;
And Alma Mater's cherished sons now hear the ringing call
For men to fill the place of men who in life's conflict fall.

CHORUS:--
O, dear old home,
Though far from thee we roam,
We'll love thee yet,
We'll ne'er forget
Old '78 and home.

Here, friends of four short years, we part, it may be never more
To meet in these old college halls where we have met of yore;
But friendships formed in college days, and ties that bind our youth,
We'll strengthen in the years to come by lives of manly truth.

CHORUS:--

We'll not forget the honest toil of those who plied the oar,
And o'er the sea of knowledge rowed the boys they found on shore,
For them we'll raise a parting song, for them fond mem'ries keep,
As forth to-day we launch our boat and boldly try the deep.

CHORUS:--
With hope and zeal we enter life, along its hurrying years
To act with men in mind and heart, of earlier worth the peers,
And in the din and toil of life, be high and true our aim,
To honor by a grand career our Alma Mater's name.

Chorus:

O, dear old home,
Though far from thee we roam,
We'll love the yet, we'll ne'er forget
Old '78 and home.

— Farewell Song.—

Come, classmates, we must now be going
Far, far away—
Each one our several path pursuing,
Here we no more can stay.
All around the wide creation
Bravely we’ll roam,
First visiting “The old plantation,”
And our dear “Old Folks at Home.”

Here many years we’ve spent in learning—
Sweet years of toil—
Old times and many pages turning,
Burning the midnight oil,
All enraptured by the beauty
Of the world of thought;
Now we must each go forth to duty,
Teaching the lessons taught.

We bid farewell to Alma Mater
With many a tear;
Oh, may her glory e’er grow greater
With every passing year:—
May she rise a sun of morning
In wisdom’s plan,
All realms of Art and Truth adorning,
Speaking the rights of man!

Now classmates, here’s a hand in token
Of friendship true;
Always shall kindly words be spoken,
Always the heart prove true;
As we part, we pray, in sadness,
All may be well;
May we meet again with songs of gladness;—
But now a kind farewell.
