ELECTIVE STUDIES.

Students may reside at the University and pursue studies, for a longer or shorter time, in any of the classes, at their own election; subject, however, to the regulations of the Faculty.

ASTRONOMICAL DEPARTMENT.

The Astronomical Department of the University is the Dearborn Observatory. Its objects are to make direct researches in science, to operate in the application of Astronomy to Geography, and other useful purposes, and to train students in practical Astronomy preparatory to such applications. The instruments of the Observatory are the great Clark Refractor, 5½ inches aperture; the Meridian Circle by Repsold & Son; presented by the Hon. W. R. Gurney; a Howard Clock and a Bond Chronometer. The work is done chiefly in co-operation with the German Astronomical Society and the Bureau of the United States Engineers.

PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT.

Connected with the University is a Preparatory Department, in which the Professors of the University have charge of the instruction in the studies belonging to the several departments. The studies have been arranged in a course of three years for classical, and two years for scientific students.

To meet the practical wants of the different classes of students, the Trustees have made arrangements for regular instruction in Penmanship, Book-keeping, and other branches essential to a good commercial education.

The success of this Department under the present management warrants the Trustees in calling special attention to the opportunities afforded to young men for acquiring a practical English education, as well as a thorough preparation for their best Colleges.

DEGREES.

The degree of Bachelor of Arts is conferred upon all students who have completed the prescribed Classical course of study, and passed a satisfactory examination therein. The degree of Bachelor of Science upon all who have completed the Scientific Course, and passed a similar examination.

SOCIETIES.

There are three societies in the University, conducted by the students—two Literary and one Religious.

ILLUSTRATIVE APPARATUS.

The Lectures on Chemistry and Natural Philosophy are illustrated by modern apparatus. There are also facilities for the illustration of Zoology and other branches of Natural History.

The Library, to which the students have free access, contains about five thousand volumes and is constantly increasing by valuable additions. Students will also have access to the very valuable theological and miscellaneous library: formerly belonging to the late Prof. Hengstenberg, of Berlin, now placed in the University buildings.

LOCATION, BUILDINGS, ETC.

The location of the University is in the south part of Chicago, directly on the Cottage Grove avenue line of the Chicago City Railway. The site was the gift of the late Senator Douglas, and is universally admired for its beauty and healthfulness. The building is unsurpassed for the completeness of its arrangements, especially of the students' rooms, which are in suites of a study and two bed rooms, of good size and height, and well ventilated.

EDITORIAL.

Base ball comes in for a moderate share of attention and is receiving it. The College nine is composed, with perhaps two exceptions, of the best players in College, and could they make the practice of base ball their prime object, few clubs outside professionals could rival them. They have splendid grounds near by, on which to practice, but as yet there has not been enough enthusiasm manifested in the national game to make practice at home or playing abroad a complete success. The nine showed their superior native skill in the first game at Evanston. They neglected practice, and the next game with Evanston more than reversed the score. We have a nine which we are satisfied can beat any College nine in the Northwest; if they will only spend a reasonable time in practice, and thus do justice to their own abilities. The VOLANTE does not ask them to impair their scholarship, for the sake of winning honor on the diamond field, but if they expect to gain laurels from other clubs, why must they do as other clubs do--make base ball an import, if not a chief object; and in addition they must not let Billy Arthur go just yet, for they have no one who can fill his place as a catcher.

We learn with the greatest regret that Professor Stearns has decided to leave us, and take up his abode on the other side of the world, in the Argentine Republic. The two leading motives that induce him to take this step are the health of his family, and the liberal offer of that government. The Argentine Republic has adopted the American system of schools, and is sending to this country for experienced educators to superintend the instruction of their teachers in the Normal Schools of that country. When health is the consideration that prompts his decision, we can have no objection to urge, but this University cannot afford to lose the Professor on the score of money. They can afford to multiply his present salary by two or three rather than part with him. Professor Stearns has been connected with this University for nine years, and has steadily grown in favor with the students as a personal friend, and in efficiency as a teacher, and it is no reflection on any of our instruc tors to say that he stands second to no member of the Faculty as a teacher. If, however, Prof. Stearns must go, we can assure him that he will leave with the best wishes and kindest regards of every one of us, and by us we ever will be held in affectionate remembrance.

It is not in the least surprising that the contest lately held at Galesburg, should have called forth expressions of dislike, or even of contempt, from some of our lordly eastern exchangethers. It is very natural that the older children should smile at, and look down upon, any effort or project that has originated with the younger. And this is all well enough, we suppose. But it is a lit tle strange that the Yale papers should lead off, in the use of such expressions. It would seem that the exponents of a college, where the interest taken in oratory and debat ing is so inextimizable small, would be the last to decry contests in oratory, even though these contests did not originate with themselves; but it is not so. At Yale the customary junior prize exhibitions has been abandoned, through lack of enthusiasm on the part of the students.

"It's not Yale, after a lingering and protracted illness, The Sheffield Debating Club. Another of the signs of progress at Yale."--Midwesnian.

The Record expresses its regrets that Yale cannot be a competitor at the literary, contest next January. We do not know what are her reasons for declining to enter the lists. Of course, we all know that Yale would beat off the palm, should she deign to race with the plebeians.

It was, no doubt, a matter of congratulation to western colleges that such an interest in such performances was shown, even by those who generally have so little regard for such things.

It will be deemed the greatest presumption on our part, but yet, even at the hazard of our reputation and standing, we advise the Yale weeklies to restrain their just indignation as far as consistent with their lofty position. They should allow lightly to descend the bolts that Jove has committed to their charge. The consist ents of these papers is not surpassed by that of the Advocate, and yet when he says: "Our exchanges were never duller," and then makes four or five quotations from said exchanges, going to show that "the Magna and Advocate are applauded by the skies."

If the Courtant and Record would cease their quarrel ing, and give less space to strictrues upon other papers, we think they would reflect more credit upon Yale College, and give greater satisfaction to all.
A recent copy of the Standard, of this city, contains this paragraph: "We learn that there is great probability that four out of the five ministers in the graduating class of the University, will be compelled to abandon their studies and not enter the Theological Seminary for the want of means." From what follows, the necessary inference is that the "five are all practical advocates of the "system." The error was corrected in the subsequent number of the Standard, but it had swelled into the crepe into other papers in the city, and, of course, the correction was not copied. It is sometimes amazing how rapidly such little errors will creep.

We know of no good reason why ministerials should not be subject to the same rules as students with medicine or law in the view in. If, after four years of hard work, they have good reasons for suspending their study for a year, surely, one should object to study.

Nor do we believe that the demand for good ministers is more urgent than the demand for good lawyers. So ask the doctors, lawyers and ministers of the class all seek for the same rights, privileges and immunities. They them that no misguided "appeals" be made in their behalf.

Dr. Roise, Dean of the Faculty, left the city on the 8th inst. en route for Europe. He, purposes, we understand, to spend a portion of his time in the cure of the, but his health has first in view a trip to Italy. The Professor has gone follow, we are sure, by the good wishes of all the members of '74, who, in their wide, scattered careers of art, science and men, enough, having experienced the tutelage of a variety of teachers, and have become qualified, to some extent, to appreciate a good one.

Dr. Roise, and we believe it fulsome to say it now, is, in his department, not only an eminent scholar, but what concerns the student even more, an eminent teacher. He is one of the nicest of our old acquaintance, and his head is weighty with the mental accumulations of numerous years, store-houses as it were of classic, literary, scientific lore, but who are more blessed with the happy faculty of imparting it, than the others in the ice-berg is with the quality of imparting warmth to the ship-wrecked and the cold.

One of the Professor's success, we think, is in his adherence to a principle, of which most student's own experience will tell them the truth: It is this: He contains in himself hastily reciting as little as possible, and causing the pupil to recite as much as possible, in drawing him out by throwing him upon his own resources, and in extirpating from him his difficulties by impressing such lectures have made upon them by their simply hav- been heard, and how little of them they can remem- ber; and, on the other hand, will consider how much greater an impression they have made upon of perhaps the morning they have received it in the class-room, where they were compelled to think con- cerning it, and to understand it more or less in order to able at all to recite it, must admit the superiority of this system of teaching.

Another principal upon which we think exists largely into the possession of the successful teacher, is that he be a good disciplinarian, not in the sense alone in which this term relates to instruction, but to government. One man, seeming to recognize the elevated position and his exalted authority, makes a great display of the exercise of government, but after all its vain dinns gagelessly in his hands—he succeeds only in disgracing those unfortunate enough to happen within his jurisdiction. Another is firm in his requirement of thoroughness and punctual attendance, he is the last man to cavil at the occasional absence of the diligent student, and the readiness to excite him—he commands the respect of his pupils, and his recitations are the last they ever think of "cutting." In this respect then, no professor we have ever met, could he called the superior of Dr. Roise.

As a class, our relations with the Professor are finally closed; in the future we can entertain of those relations only the kindliest reminiscences. Now we all alike can join in wishing him a pleasant sojourn in his favorite haunts of the old world, and a safe return next fall, in invigorated health, to occupy the chair he is so well qualified to fill.

The practice of hazing had prevailed in that Univer- sity for many years, and was carried on not only at the beginning of each year, but on all convenient occasions. It would seem proper then that if the faculty wished to put an end to this custom, it would by a formal edict have declared hazing an offense before they attempted to punish it as a crime.

at either place, and relishes a scanty meal at a cheap restaurant, in each of the foregoing cases he is liable, unless he be a professor, to forgo his room, at least in the opinion of the Faculty.

For our part we apprehend no such result. We are not acquainted with a student "with soul so dead" as to out a fellow-student from his room, because he happens to walk in a different direction at the dinner hour. We think the action of the Faculty can result in no good. If enforced, it works a perpetual discord, and if any one takes advantage of that provision to secure a more desirable room than he otherwise could obtain, it will have afforded a temptation and a stimulus for the development of an ungenerous and selfish disposition.

JOSEPH HAVEN.

A year ago we were called upon to chronicle the death of one of our ablest instructors, Col. J. W. Foster, L. L. D., Professor of Geology. This year the band of death has taken from his accustomed place, another who is more deeply lamented, because more intimately and widely known. Many are in mourning for our much-loved friend and instructor, the late Rev. Joseph Haven, L. L. D.

Of his early boyhood and student life, of his eminent success as a Professor at the age of thirty, of the ability which he displayed as President of the Chicago Congregational Seminary, in leading it from weakness to prosperity, of the remark that was made when he worked on Mental and Moral Philosophy, it is not necessary that we speak; the press throughout the length and breadth of the land has mentioned his death and sounded his praises.

To us he sustained more intimate & enduring relations than he did to the majority of those who make considerable acquaintance and form a lasting friendship with him. The embryo D. D. has successfully passed their severe examination without an undue amount of cramping. They had their pieces, and exhibited all the nervousness of freshmen, as they cast furtive glances at the pulpit in which they were so soon to thunder forth compressed eloquence. Most of the orations exhibited deep and serious thought, and were surrounded by the occasion, those of Rev.'s Coon and Jackson taking the lead in point of merit. However, that the performers manifested so great a lack of ease and grace in delivery, only two of the orators showing themselves to be at home on the rostrum. The exercises of May 14, show that a chair of elocution is needed at the Seminary.

There were eight who graduated, but six only of the number had made orations.

The following is the programme of exercises: J. M. Coon, "The Secret of the Sermon"; E. A. Ince, "Amiabilism"; J. L. Jackson, "Sects and Sectarianism"; C. M. Jones, "Shall We Study Theology?" R. E. Manning, "Tree Thinking and Freedom of Thought"; R. P. Stephenson, "An Heroic Spirit in the Ministry." H. H. Depperman and W. H. Irwin, were also among those who graduated on that occasion. Dr. Arnold closed the exercises by an address to the graduating class, which was replete with weighty thought and sound advice.

The DOGMA AND THE ETHICS OF CHRISTIANITY.

It justly may be a source of exultation to the children of this age, that with the advance of modern civilization, as it recedes from those dark ages when the state of the world was a few centuries before, the embers of D. D. has successfully passed the severe examination without an undue amount of cramping. They had their pieces, and exhibited all the nervousness of freshmen, as they cast furtive glances at the pulpit in which they were so soon to thunder forth compressed eloquence. Most of the orations exhibited deep and serious thought, and were surrounded by the occasion, those of Rev.'s Coon and Jackson taking the lead in point of merit. COMMUNICATED

According to previous announcement, the final "Friendly Contest," between the literary societies of Northwestern and Chicago Universities, occurred on the evening of May 12, 1900. The Tarasch, of Chicago, was victorious. Before the time appointed for opening the exercises, the room was filled by an interesting and appreciative audience. Hon. J. R. DoLittle, President of Chicago University, presided.

After prayer by Prof. Fink, the literary exercises were opened by an oration by R. Benton Twin, of the Athenaeum Society. His subject was, "The Trio of Life." The oration was in every way worthy of praise; the composition was good and the delivery pleasing and graceful; perhaps a trifle too many gestures. The conception of the piece was particularly fine. Music by the Adelphic quartette followed, after which F. M. Beatty, the Bishop of the Hinsman Society, spoke on the subject, "Intolerance." The production was distinguished for its independent thought; and he held the attention of the audience not so much by his graceful delivery, as by his earnest animated style.

Music by the Tri Kappa quartette was next announced. Then followed the debate on the question: "Should capital punishment be abolished?" O. W. Willits, of the Adelphic, and M. S. Kaufman, of the Hinsman, supported the affirmative; and R. M. Ireland, of the Athenæanum, and C. H. D. Fisher, of the Tri Kappa, spoke for the negative. The question has been debated before, but the speakers threw such life into their remarks that all were interested in the discussion. Each debater did justice to the question and honor to himself, and for the space of an hour, argument and pathos were plentiful. Mr. Willits delivered a very effective and Good reasoning and his lively style of speaking gained the applause of the audience. Mr. Ireland spoke in a very easy and natural manner, and sound reasoning argument his debate was not excelled by any of the evening. Mr. Kaufman gave the finest written speech. His voice is clear and strong, and his delivery unvoiced. Mr. Fisher closed the debate with a telling speech.

A song by the Athenæum quartette followed. Geo. Sutherland, of the Tri Kappa, delivered an oration on the subject, "Gamalile." Mr. Sutherland never acquitted himself with so much credit. In thought, composition, arrangement and delivery, the oration was an able one, and drew from the audience hearty applause.

J. Welsey Richards, of the Adelphic, concluded the literary exercises with an oration upon "The Magyar." The visitor from Chicago were very kindly welcomed, and entertained by Evansan friends.

We trust that this may not be the last time the two colleges meet as friendly contestants.

PERSONAL

On the evening of May 12, and at the residence of the Hon. L. C. Bosworth, of Elgin, Mr. W. E. Bosworth was united by the ties of matrimony, to Miss Ada L. Woodruff, the Rev. L. M. Woodruff performing the ceremony.

E. F. Stearns and lady we are told expect to sail, after commencement, for Europe, where they will remain for a year or two.

Robert Leslie was in the city during the commencement of the Theological Seminary.

C. S. Sweet is engaged in a successful law practice in this city.

J. G. Davidson has returned from Europe, and is visiting his friends in the city.

G. M. Lambertson, after picking up a sufficient quantity of legal lore, in a half dozen states, has gone to Lincoln, Neb., to put it in practice.

C. A. Avery graduated a few weeks ago at the Chicago Eclectic Medical College. Beverly delivered the valedictory, which was highly commended by the city press. He is now prepared to examine bums or feel poulse.

C. H. Hall will deliver the Alumni address at Franklin College, June 12. How many institutions can a man graduate from and feel so proud of having graduated from only one?

J. L. Jackson, and Miss Ella Lovell, of Norwood Park, were married on the evening of February 3rd, by Rev. C. M. Jones.

R. F. Colston graduated lately from the law department of Michigan University, and has gone to smash wealth in Louisville, Kentucky.

J. H. Sampson is supplying the pulpit of the First Baptist Church of Monroe, Vermont.

A. C. Watts delivered a sermon in a Barrington pulpit.

G. E. Bailey has accepted the appointment of Professor of Natural Sciences, in the State Normal School of Nebraska.

J. S. Barmore is leading the Crown Point Church in the way they should go.

R. A. Allison supplies the pulpit of the Twenty-fifth street Baptist Church, during the vacation of the pastor, the Rev. L. T. Bush.

The first "union" contest of the four societies was ended. Every one departed well pleased with the performance. The visitors from Chicago were very kindly welcomed and entertained by Evansan friends.

We trust that this may not be the last time the two colleges meet as friendly contestants.

AT HOME.

THE ATHENEAUM ANNIVERSARY.

The anniversary of the Athenæum Society occurred on the evening of the 12th inst. Two other entertainments being held the same evening in the immediate vicinity, the audience was not an large; but the constitution is unusually drawn, but still a fair number of the beauty and the chivalry of the place were gathered to "enjoy the feast of reason." The speakers were not all of much experience in public exercises of this kind, as the society had already furnished participants for the two literary contests during the year, but taking this into account the meeting was very good.

After prayer by Mr. J. W. Dean, Mr. C. L. Lewis, president of the society, in his introductory address, proceeded to gracefully extol the merits of old Athenæum, to pay the compliments due to the halls of fame, and to thank the audience for the inspiration given by their presence.

Mr. T. N. Treat, the first orator of the evening, then explained to us what he meant by the "Coming Republic." He gave his reasons for believing in a future grand universal republic, and declared that its capstone would be "the universal brotherhood of man." Although the delivery of his oration, Mr. Treat did not fail to exhibit some of his very peculiar peculiarities, the production was well written especially in the peroration.

When the cheers had subsided, the popular young reader, and loyal son of Athenæum, Mr. C. Dale Armstrong, much to the entertainment of the company, read "A Leap Year Wooling." The gentleman received an encore, and responded by an exhibition of his powers of meterization. Mr. Armstrong is a fine reader, and deserving of the success he has met with in his public readings everywhere.

"Reply declared himself no less than his opponent a believer in education, but denied the necessity of compliance, showing that our system of free schools wherever established, had not failed to bring forth the desired fruit. Mr. Hastings is a strong and logical debater, earnest though hardly forcible enough in his delivery. We would like to say something good about the
The first match game of much importance, played by the University nine, occurred at Evanston, Friday afternoon, May 3d. It was the first of a series of games between the N. W. U., and the C. U. nines. Each nine played excellently, and reflected credit upon their respective colleges. We were all present at Evanston, Friday, May 22d. The game was very finely contested up to the ninth inning, when the Socials, by splendid batting, made five runs. Such games as this are seldom seen among amateurs. Below will be found the score:

EXCHANGES.

The College press have about disposed of inter-collegiate contests. \"The Ring,\" however, is still very active and energetic. The students are now more engaged in discussing commemorative exercises, base ball matches and regattas. The mantle of supply has not yet fallen upon them, for they are not near so interesting this month.

The Select monthly mourns the decline of the base ball spirit, and eagerly looks forward to the time when the innings again be revised. \"Is Sports dead?\" it asks in eloquent words. \"Character of oratory, and Christianity in Politics,\" are both well-written articles which deserve the attention of our readers.

The College Herald very truly replies to a communication in the National Baptist, on the subject of college expenses, class music, &c. It is a good thing to be able to defend one's self against the insinuating remarks of ignorant outsiders, and this the Herald can do.

The Seminary Bulletin comes to us from Sacramento Seminary. Its communications and literary are good; some of them excellent.

The Ann Arbor Chronicle devotes considerable space in its columns to the discussion of the late unpleasantness between the Faculty and students. We admire their spirit of independence.

The Cornell Review is the largest of our magazines. Its communications are able, and for its neatness and appearance is commendable.

The College Mercury is giving particular attention to commencement and class day arrangements. They have the base ball spirit up to a fine match game with the Evanston nine. The first literary piece, \"The Prospect for American Taines,\" is well worth reading. The Mercury has hard work to prove that it is not a plagiarist, but it succeeds tolerably well.

The Rockford Seminary Magazine for May contains an excellent article on \"Goldsmith,\" and other good things. Its typographical appearance is neat and tasteful, but there is one objection, it is a good magazine, but not a good college journal.

We are pleased with the Bodeinian Orient. The issue for May 6th is loaded with a new list of editors. It contains an extended and interesting piece upon literary societies.

The Illini for May is superior to the preceding numbers, yet it is not what it should be as a magazine of the Industrial University. More than half of its pages are given to contributions. \"It Might Have Been,\" and one or two other selections are interesting. A few good editorialism would help the Illini remarkably.

The Brunswickian still ranks among the best of college magazines. The last number we have received has a good editorial on \"Excellence in Writing,\" and several number one contributions. The \"History of Class of '57,\" is quite a novel affair, but is too lengthy.

We have received No. 1, Vol. I of the Crescent, published by the students of the college. We welcome it as an exchange. We would kindly suggest more editorial and less literary matter.

The Echo of Santa Clara, Cal. Its contributions are not up to the standard which they should take. \"Adventures of a Strong-Minded Kitten,\" has only reached its XXV Chapter. The Owl bravely defends itself against the invasion of the Chronicle.

We will close our notices with the Vassar Miscellany. Everybody notices the Miscellany; why shouldn't they? We like the tone of the magazine. It is simply delightful to see how artfully and politely it replies to compliments from exchanges. Its literary and editorial department is well sustained. From \"Home Matters,\" we copy the following items, that may be of interest to some of our readers:

Number of Graduating Class, 1876, 42

Average Height, 5 ft. 4 in.
Average Age, 21 years,
A sop, the other day at an auction, was amusing himself by picking up merino cotton batting on the country, when it was startled by the stentorian voice of the auctioneer with, "let that alone, many a young man has been ruined by meddling with cotton." Worthy the scope have the courage to write prize essays, when it is doubtful whether any prizes are in store, even for the successful contestants. Four noble men, at a time, have the strength against the world, the cold, the future, and the weather, and will not but originate productions worthy of their great abilities.

At a meeting of the Student's Association, about a month ago, which was carried on without becoming dig- nity and decorum, in the midst of the greatest confusion the following persons were elected officers of the Associa- tion: President: T. N. Trent; Vice-President, Boga- rus; Secretary, R. B. Tins; Treasurer, H. I. Bosworth.

Alas for 'senior corner' of ancient fame. It is now beset by wild freshmen, and the echoes of prize decla- nations sound forth from dawn till midnight. Now we say, "Let him write. Now your brush," and then, "I tell thee thou art defiled." while over all comes the ever practical question, "Is Sparta deajt-fad?" We pledge the "creams" to the freshman who will abstain from the use of otary after 8 o'clock, A. M. Captain Jack and his brother Moders have shunted off the mortals and wended their way to the great spirit under the auspices of the national government. There has been, however, no government sufficiently efficient to exterminate the modes of our lads. They flourish under the wings of the University, upon the blood of their suffering sons.

A very rapid, safe and easy way to make money, is to pro- cure territory to introduce the latest useful invention that is wanted by the community, who have a full sized sewing Machine with Table and Treadle for only $65.00. We have the same work as a Machine you would pay $50.00 for, rapid, smooth and firm, makes a seam so strong the cloth will last before the stitches give way. Eight new attachments for all work and the improved Button Holder used by us only. Agents only charged to give them in operation to sell in safe- smart agents. No such Machine was ever offered at any such price. Tiericon last sold, 100,000 Families use them. Demand increasing every day where they become known. Min- ister, lawyers, Editors, Machinists, Tailors, &c., rec- ommend them as perfect. Rights given free to first applicants. If you can interest one of your friends, write for the Machine for your Family or a relation, there is none better or more convenient in the country against the competition, at a price $50.00. Read advertisement beginning "To save in every Family" or write for the catalogue. Address the Proprietor: ROBERT J. MELLANOR & CO., 366 Canal Street, New York.

The President of Cornell University says the young women there average to 10 cents per better on the examination papers than the young men. -Ex.
