From 654 to 452 B.C. the plebeians were striving to escape from their slavery and from 450 to 350 B.C. they were trying to gain as much power in the government as the patrician. In the year 362 B.C. the plebeians were really successful, but they had difficulty in making the patricians keep the Cyprian Law passed in the year 396 B.C., which provided: 1. That the poor should be helped to pay their debts. 2. When the debts were paid, they should have pieces of the public land, and the rich should be allowed to sell or feed cattle on a part of it only.
