Biographical Note

Donald J. Bogue (1918-2014) was a demographer and longtime University of Chicago Professor of Sociology. Bogue was born in Utah, but spent most of his childhood in Missouri. He received his BA in sociology in 1939 from the University of Iowa, an MA in sociology in 1940 from Washington State College, and a PhD in sociology from the University of Michigan in 1949. During World War II, he served as a statistician for the U.S. Navy. He married Elizabeth Mullen in 1944, who collaborated with him on many of his projects. She died in 1973.

Upon earning his PhD, he joined the faculty at Miami University and joined the University of Chicago in 1954. He was affiliated with the National Opinion Research Center and was responsible for founding and leading several population research centers at the University. He produced several hundred reports, books, and monographs on topics ranging from metropolitan decentralization, to population growth in metropolitan areas, to suburbanization, to population and socioeconomic development internationally, to mass education on family planning. In 1964, Bogue founded Demography, the Journal of the Population Association of America and served as its first editor from 1964 to 1969. His interest in family planning made him a major force in the worldwide movement for population control. He directed USAID and Ford Foundation-funded contracts to improve the evaluation of family planning programs' impact on fertility in low-income countries and also trained demographers and clinicians through international workshops on the use of mass communications in family planning programs. The Donald J. Bogue Papers document his life in Chicago and his international work in Latin American, Asian, and African countries.
