Descriptive Summary

Identifier	ICU.SPCL.COASER
Title	Coase, Ronald H. Papers
Date	1805-2013
Size	112.5 linear feet (186 boxes)
Repository	Special Collections Research Center University of Chicago Library 1100 East 57th Street Chicago, Illinois 60637 U.S.A.

Abstract Ronald H. Coase (1910-2013) was an influential economist and one of the founders of the field of law and economics. He was awarded the Nobel Memorial Prize in 1991 in recognition of his work on transaction costs, firms, property rights, and institutional economics. Coase held positions at the London School of Economics, the University of Buffalo, and the University of Virginia before finishing his career at the University of Chicago Law School. His work covered a wide range of topics, including public utilities, the post office, broadcasting, lighthouses, and the economic development of China. This collection primarily documents Coase's research, writing, and correspondence with colleagues. It includes drafts, typescripts, reprints, text of lectures, notes, reports, letters, and research files. Also included are photographs, clippings, personal ephemera, artifacts, and copies of academic journal articles. The collection ranges in date from 1807-2013, with the bulk of the material dating from 1950-2010.

Information on Use

Access

The collection is open for research, with the exception of Series X, which contains financial, personnel, and student information to which access is restricted. Subseries 1 and 2 contain financial, legal, and personnel information that are restricted for 50 years from the record's date of creation. Subseries 3 contains student information and is restricted for 80 years from the record's date of creation.

The digital media, film, and VHS video cassettes in Series VII do not contain access copies. Researchers will need to consult with staff before requesting this material.

Biographical Note

Ronald Coase was one of the more influential economists of the twentieth century. His work in the field of law and economics prompted new ways of thinking about the relationship between markets, firms, property, and the government. In 1991, he was awarded the Nobel Prize in Economics in recognition of his two most influential essays, “The Nature of the Firm” (1937) and “The Problem of Social Cost” (1960), as well as for his role as editor of the Journal of Law and Economics.

Ronald Harry Coase was born on December 29, 1910 in Willesden, England, to Henry Joseph and Rosalie Giles. His father worked for the Postal Office, as had his mother prior to her marriage. He later recounted that his early education was unique. As a child he wore leg braces and attended a primary school for children with physical disabilities. At the age of twelve, a year later than most students, he received a scholarship to Kilburn Grammar School. Following this, Coase entered the London School of Economics in October 1929. While there, he took a seminar with Professor Arnold Plant that introduced him to the ideas of Adam Smith. He later described this as a transformative event in his development as an economist. After completing his coursework at LSE, he earned a scholarship to spend a year visiting factories and businesses in the United States with the aim of developing a theory of industrial organization. He worked under the guidance of Arnold Plant and later wrote that this was another highly transformative experience, as he became aware of and began to think seriously about costs of market transactions. He graduated from the London School of Economics with a Bachelor’s of Commerce in 1932.

In 1932 Coase became an assistant lecturer at the recently established Dundee School of Economics and Commerce. As he later recalled, a lecture he delivered in one of his courses here became the foundation for the article “The Nature of the Firm,” published in 1937. In 1934, he moved to the University of Liverpool, and in 1935 to the London School of Economics. Among the courses he taught at LSE was one on public utilities, which prompted him to carry out extensive research on public utilities such as electricity and water in Great Britain.

Coase spent the World War II years doing statistical work for the British government at the Statistical Division of the Forestry Commission and Central Statistical Office. He returned to the London School of Economics in 1946, where he continued his research in public utilities. In 1948, he earned a fellowship to spend nine months in the United States studying the broadcasting industry. He earned his doctorate in economics from the University of London in 1951.

Coase came to the United States in 1951, in part due to his dissatisfaction with the state of British politics, and was a professor at the University of Buffalo from 1951-1958. He spent the 1958-1959 academic year at Stanford's Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences before beginning a position at the University of Virginia, where he remained until 1964.

In 1959, after years of research, Coase published a paper on the Federal Communications Commission and its efforts to sell the radio frequency spectrum. According to recollections of Coase and several other economists, a group of University of Chicago economists disagreed with a key point in the paper and invited Coase to discuss it with them. He successfully convinced them of the merits of his position and was invited to submit a piece to the Journal of Law and Economics. This article, "The Problem of Social Cost," was published in 1960 and became one of the most heavily cited law review articles of the twentieth century.

In 1964 Coase accepted an offer to join the faculty at the University of Chicago, where he initially held a joint appointment at the School of Law and Graduate School of Business. In 1970 he transitioned to an appointment exclusively with the Law School, and in 1971 he was named the school's first Clifton R. Musser Professor in Economics.

At Chicago, Coase edited the Journal of Law and Economics from 1964-1982, where he was highly influential in encouraging studies and papers about the way markets and governments actually function. He is considered one of the founders of the field of law and economics and was one of the first professors of economics employed at a law school. His research at Chicago covered a wide range of topics, including blackmail, lighthouses, and the economist Alfred Marshall. He was a Senior Research Fellow at Stanford University's Hoover Institution in 1977 and became Professor Emeritus at Chicago in 1982. Through the last years of his life, Coase remained active in the field. His research interests expanded to include the economic development of China, and he continued to write, conduct research, lecture, and organize and participate in conferences.

In addition to his two most influential articles, Coase's publications include The Iron and Steel Industry 1926-1935: An Investigation Based on the Accounts of Public Companies (1940), with R.S. Edwards and R.F. Fowler; British Broadcasting: A Study in Monopoly (1950); Educational TV: Who Should Pay? (1968) with Edward W. Barrett; The Firm, the Market and the Law (1988); Essays on Economics and Economists (1994); and How China Became Capitalist (2012), written with Ning Wang, a longtime research assistant.

In 2013, the Coase-Sandor Institute for Law and Economics at the University of Chicago Law School was named in his honor following a donation from Richard and Ellen Sandor. In addition to the Nobel Prize, Coase was awarded numerous honorary degrees, awards, and fellowships, including an Innovation Award from The Economist in 2003.

Ronald Coase married Marian Ruth Hartung, a cellist and teacher, in 1937. They met in Chicago, her hometown, in 1932 during his travels in the United States. She predeceased him in 2012. Ronald Coase died in Chicago on September 2, 2013.

Scope Note

The Ronald H. Coase Papers are organized into ten series:

I. Personal and Biographical

II. Correspondence

III. Writing

IV. Research

V. Teaching

VI. Writing by Others

VII. Audiovisual

VIII. Oversize

IX. Artifacts

X. Restricted

Series I, Personal and Biographical, contains brief biographies, curriculum vitae, documents related to awards and honors Coase received, personal correspondence, art and travel ephemera, notes, clippings and publications reflecting personal interests of Ronald and Marian Coase, and French-language material. More detailed information about the series can be found in the inventory section. Some of Coase's friends were also colleagues and therefore have correspondence in both this series and Series II, Correspondence. The material ranges in date from 1805-2013, with the bulk dating from the 1950s-2000s.

Series II, Correspondence, consists of Ronald Coase's professional correspondence, including both incoming and outgoing letters. Correspondents include other economists; colleagues at his places of employment, and research assistants. The correspondence covers topics such as research, papers, and projects; professional associations; the publishing process; and issues in the field of law and economics. There are also a significant amount of unsolicited letters from individuals seeking advice, offering papers for Coase to read, or inviting him to speak at an event or present at an upcoming conference. In general, documents that accompanied the correspondence have been left with it, so many folders also include typescripts, articles, reports, and notes. The material ranges in date from 1928-2013.

Series III, Writing, contains articles, texts of lectures and interviews, book chapters, papers, and reports by Ronald Coase. It includes handwritten drafts, typescripts, reprints, copies, and published versions of this work. Reviews, notes, correspondence, and small amounts of research directly related to a particular piece of writing are generally included in this series. The material ranges in date from 1934-2013.

Series IV, Research, contains Ronald Coase's extensive research files. It includes notes, government documents from Great Britain and the United States, reports, clippings, copies of 19th century documents from other libraries and archives, correspondence, and articles. It is arranged in to subseries according to the following topics: Public Utilities and Water Supply, Broadcasting, Post Office, Alfred Marshall, Lighthouses, Blackmail, General Motors and Fisher Body, Nobel Prize Winners, and general bibliographies, resource lists, and citation analysis. More detailed information about each subseries can be found in the inventory section. The material ranges in date from 1890-2009, with the bulk dating from the 1950s-2000s.

Series V, Teaching, contains a small amount of material that appears to have been related to Ronald Coase's teaching, mostly a large set of notes on court cases from the course Business 386. Most of the other documents in this series were not clearly labeled, so the particular course or seminar they correspond to is often not known. The material ranges in date from the 1930s-1982, with a number of undated items.

Series VI, Writing by Others, contains articles, papers, and other writings not by Ronald Coase. This includes academic journal articles, mostly from the fields of economics and law; conference papers; journals, newsletters, reports, and brochures; and newspaper and magazine articles. One series contains articles about Ronald Coase and his work, and another is devoted to writing by and about Duncan Black, a British economist. More detailed information about each subseries can be found in the inventory section. The writings range in date from 1887-2013, although many appear to be late twentieth or early twenty first century reprints or copies.

Series VII, Audiovisual, contains photographs, negatives, digital media, two VHS cassette tapes, unlabeled moving picture film, and a microfilm reel. The photographs are mostly images from Ronald and Marian Coase's personal life, particularly their travels in Europe and apartment in the South of France. Some of these images are dated or labeled, likely by Marian Coase. Also included are some images that appear to be of the Coase's family and friends, although many are unlabeled and undated. Some of the unlabeled photographs appear to date from as early as the late 19th century. The most recent is from 2013. The digital media dates from 2008-2012 and mostly consists of recordings from the 2008 conference on the economic transformation of China organized by Ronald Coase and Ning Wang.

Series VIII, Oversize, contains material too large to fit in legal-size folders. It mostly corresponds to the Research series, particularly to the topics of broadcasting and Alfred Marshall, although most of the other series are represented as well. It also includes diplomas, personal clippings and publications, a few pieces of Ronald Coase's writing, and writings by others. The material ranges in date from 1924-2012 and includes a significant number of copies of 19th century documents.

Series IX, Artifacts, contains physical artifacts, mostly from Ronald Coase's personal life or related to honors he received. The material ranges in date from 1807-2012.

Series X, Restricted, contains material to which access is restricted. Subseries 1 contains financial, legal, and personnel information, from both Ronald Coase's personal life and the University of Chicago, and is restricted for 50 years from the date of the record's creation. The series will be fully open in 2061. Subseries 2 contains letters of recommendations for colleagues and is restricted for 50 years from the date of the record's creation. It will be fully open in 2050. Subseries 3 contains student information, mostly letters of recommendation, which is restricted for 80 years from the record's date of creation. The series will be fully open in 2090.

Series II: Correspondence

This series consists of Ronald Coase's professional correspondence, including both incoming and outgoing letters. Correspondents include other economists; colleagues at his places of employment, including the London School of Economics, University of Buffalo, University of Virginia, and University of Chicago School of Law; and research assistants. The correspondence covers topics such as research, papers, and projects; professional associations; the publishing process; and issues in the field of law and economics. There are also a significant amount of unsolicited letters from individuals seeking advice, offering papers for Coase to read, or inviting him to speak at an event or present at an upcoming conference. In general, documents that accompanied the correspondence have been left with it, so many folders also include typescripts, articles, reports, and notes. The correspondence is arranged alphabetically according to the last name of the correspondent or the name of the organization they are writing on behalf of. In most cases folders contain correspondence from multiple individuals, with folder headings representing the alphabetical range of names in the folder. Correspondence from particularly prominent individuals or those with a large amount of correspondence was placed in its own folder. The material ranges in date from 1928-2013.

Series III: Writing

This series contains articles, texts of lectures and interviews, book chapters, papers, and reports by Ronald Coase, including drafts, typescripts, reprints, copies, and published versions of this work. In many cases there are multiple copies of a particular piece. Reviews, notes, correspondence, and research directly related to a particular piece of writing are also included in this series. The material is arranged chronologically, generally according to the date of publication of the piece of writing to which it corresponds. Undated material is arranged alphabetically at the end of the series. During processing, a small amount of papers and articles were found arranged by topic, and these have been placed at the end of the series. Most of this material appears to be duplicated in the chronological portion of the series. The material ranges in date from 1934-2013.

Series IV: Research

Subseries 1, Public Utilities, contains documents used for Ronald Coase's studies on public utilities in Great Britain, including gas, electricity, water supply, and railroads. It includes notes, pamphlets, articles, British government documents, and utility company reports. There are a significant number of documents on water supply, and these have been placed at the end of the subseries. The material ranges in date from 1928-2003, with some undated material, and includes copies of 19th century documents.

Subseries 2, Broadcasting, is the largest subseries in the Research series. It covers topics such as pay television, educational television, radio broadcasting, advertising, the payola controversy, the Federal Communications Commission, and the British Broadcasting Corporation. It contains a wide range of material, including popular and scholarly articles, reports, pamphlets and brochures, posters, notes, press releases, texts of speeches, and government documents such as text of testimony before the Federal Communications Commission.

The subseries is divided into four Sub-subseries. The first Sub-subseries contains folders organized according to a letter-number system beginning with either AF or BF. The material appears to have been maintained in this order by either Ronald Coase or his research assistants. AF files are related to the American system of broadcasting and BF files to the British. The last few folders in the Sub-subseries provide a more detailed description of the filing system, and following this there are three boxes of index cards that appear to be an index to the AF/BF files.

Following the AF/BF files, there is a Sub-subseries for Clippings and Articles, which also appear to have been files maintained by Coase and his research assistants. Following this, the remaining broadcasting research has been organized in to the final two sub-subseries, Correspondence and General Research files. The correspondence is arranged alphabetically according to the name or organization of the correspondent. The general research files are arranged in roughly chronological order.

The material in the Broadcasting series date from 1910-2006, with the bulk from the 1950s-1970s.

Subseries 3, Post Office, contains material related to Ronald Coase's research on the post office and telegraph systems in Great Britain and the United States, particularly efforts at post office reform. The material ranges in date from 1890-1975 and includes copies of 19th century documents. It is arranged in chronological order, with the copies of 19th century documents generally placed at the end of the series.

Subseries 4, Alfred Marshall, contains documents related to Ronald Coase's research on the economist Alfred Marshall, the majority of which is genealogical and family history research. It includes correspondence with research assistants and libraries in Australia and Great Britain, articles, genealogical information, and a significant number of copies of 19th century documents, particularly from the Queensland State Archives in Brisbane, Australia. The material ranges in date from 1903-2004. It is generally arranged chronologically, with copies and undated material placed at the end of the series.

Subseries 5, Lighthouses, contains notes, articles, reports, correspondence, and other material on lighthouses in Great Britain. The material ranges in date from 1959-2001 and includes undated material and copies of 19th century documents. It is generally arranged chronologically, with copies and undated material placed at the end of the series.

Subseries 6, Blackmail, contains articles, correspondence, notes, and other material on the economic and legal aspects of blackmail. The material ranges in date from 1907-2004. It is generally arranged chronologically, with copies and undated material placed at the end of the series.

Subseries 7, General Motors and Fisher Body, contains trial transcripts, articles, and correspondence related to General Motors' acquisition of Fisher Body. The correspondence is mostly between Ronald Coase and Benjamin Klein, regarding the two economists' differing interpretations of the case and its implications. The material ranges in date from 1928-2005. Copies of trial transcripts are placed first, and following that the material is generally arranged chronologically.

Subseries 8, Nobel Prize winners, contains articles, chapters, and notes on Nobel Prize winners. They appear to have been collected for a research project that Ronald Coase did not complete. The material ranges in date from 1967-2005.

Subseries 9, Bibliographies, resource lists, and citation analysis, contains citation analysis of works by Ronald Coase and other economists as well as general bibliographies and lists of resources. The material ranges in date from the 1970s-2009.

Series V: Teaching

This series contains material that appears to have been related to Ronald Coase's teaching. The majority of the material is a large set of notes on court cases from the course Business 386. Most of the other documents in this series were not clearly labeled, so the particular course or seminar they correspond to is often not known. The material ranges in date from the 1930s-1982, with a number of undated items. It is arranged chronologically.

Series VI: Writing by Others

Subseries 1, Articles on Ronald Coase, contains writings by others about Ronald Coase, his work, and ideas. The first portion of the subseries consists of scholarly journal articles and is arranged alphabetically according to the last name of the author. Compilations including multiple authors and works with unknown authors were placed last. Following the scholarly writing are articles from popular publications such as newspapers and magazines, which are generally arranged chronologically. The material ranges in date from 1961-2012.

Subseries 2 contains papers and related material from conferences that Ronald Coase attended, helped organize, or was invited to participate in. They are generally arranged chronologically, with the exception of material from the Coase Institute, which has been placed at the beginning of the series. Around half of Subseries 2 is material from a 2008 conference on the economic transformation of China that Ronald Coase and Ning Wang organized. The material ranges in date from 1951-2010. See Series VII, Audiovisual, for additional conference material.

Subseries 3, Journals and Newsletters, contains issues of or information on journals and newsletters. It is arranged chronologically and ranges in date from 1951-2011.

Subseries 4, Reports and brochures, includes reports from the United States government, mostly on agriculture and the environment; promotional material and reports for economics programs; and material from other corporations and organizations. It is arranged chronologically and ranges in date from 1938-2007.

Subseries 5, Writings by and about Duncan Black, contains papers, articles, and writings by and about the British economist Duncan Black, a friend of Ronald Coase. The material ranges in date from 1948-1999 and includes a few copies of 19th century documents. See the Correspondence series and Correspondence Subseries of the Personal Series for correspondence between Black and Coase.

Subseries 6, Newspaper and magazine articles, contains miscellaneous articles from popular publications. They are arranged alphabetically and range in date from 1975-2011.

Subseries 7 contains articles from academic journals not written by Ronald Coase. The publication dates of the articles range from 1887-2013, and many are reprints or copies. They are arranged alphabetically according to the last name of the author.

Series VII: Audiovisual

Series VII, Audiovisual, contains photographs, negatives, digital media, two VHS cassette tapes, unlabeled moving picture film, and a microfilm reel. The photographs are mostly images from Ronald and Marian Coase's personal life, particularly their travels in Europe and apartment in the South of France. Some of these images are dated or labeled, likely by Marian Coase. Also included are some images that appear to be of the Coase's family and friends, although many are unlabeled and undated. Some of the unlabeled photographs appear to date from as early as the late 19th century. The most recent is from 2013. The digital media dates from 2008-2012 and mostly consists of recordings from the 2008 conference on the economic transformation of China organized by Ronald Coase and Ning Wang. Access copies for the videocassettes, film, and digital material are not included. Researchers will need to consult staff before requesting these items.

Series VIII: Oversize

This series contains material too large to fit in legal-size folders. It is first arranged according to size and then according to the series to which it corresponds. It mostly corresponds to the Research series, particularly to the topics of broadcasting and Alfred Marshall, although most of the other series are represented as well. It includes pages from newspapers, clippings, posters, and other material collected as part of Ronald Coase's broadcasting research; copies of documents from the Queensland State Archives in Brisbane, Australia collected for the Alfred Marshall research project; and maps and diagrams for public utilities and water research. In addition to the research material, the oversize items include diplomas, personal clippings and publications, a few pieces of Ronald Coase's writing, and writings by others. The material ranges in date from 1924-2012 and includes a significant number of copies of 19th century documents.
