Abstract Ferdinand Kramer (1901-2002), real estate developer, devoted much of his life to projects for urban renewal and housing integration on Chicago's South Side. The papers include correspondence and speeches on issues of urban development, as well as materials relating to his work as a member of Urban American Inc., and as a developer for the Dearborn Park development in Chicago's South Loop. The collection also includes an autograph collection, and a small amount of correspondence of Ferdinand Kramer's father, Adolf Kramer.

Biographical Note

Ferdinand (Ferd) Kramer was born on August 10, 1901 in Chicago, Illinois, to Adolf and Ray Kramer. Kramer graduated from the University of Chicago Laboratory School. He went on to attend West Point and graduate from the University of Chicago with a bachelor's degree in Philosophy in 1922. He resided on Chicago's South Side for much of his life, and connected his real estate development work to his personal attachments to the South Side. In 1958, Kramer moved with his family into Prairie Shores, one of his best known housing developments on the South Side.

In 1922, Kramer began his long career in real estate when he joined his father's firm, Draper and Kramer, Inc. He became chairman of that firm in 1944, serving in that position until 1995. Kramer served as president of Chicago's Metropolitan Housing and Planning Council beginning in 1943. As a real estate developer, Kramer championed the Prairie Shores and the Lake Meadows housing complexes between the late 1940s and 1960s, and the Dearborn Park housing complex in the 1970s. Kramer saw new urban housing developments as a key way to keep middle income residents, particularly white families, in America's struggling cities. Kramer was also a proponent of managed integration, ensuring a racially diverse population within housing complexes through the use of racial quotas. Kramer's efforts at managed integration were frustrated when the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) ruled that these practices were in violation of the Fair Housing Act of 1968.

In addition to Kramer's work life, he also maintained strong ties to the University of Chicago, where he served a life trustee and was awarded the University Alumni Service Award in 1997. Kramer was also a passionate tennis player, continuing to play into his nineties. Between the 1970s and 1990s, he won twelve national seniors doubles titles from the United States Tennis Association. He also bred English Bull dogs, and was a two-time judge of the Westminster Dog Show.

Kramer married his first wife Stephanie Shambaugh Kramer (1909-1973) in 1933. A landscape architect, Stephanie Kramer designed the garden in the center of the University of Chicago Quadrangle.

Ferd Kramer died on July 16, 2002 in Chicago, Illinois. He was survived by his wife Julia Wood McDermott Kramer his children Douglas Kramer, Anthony Kramer and Barbara Kramer Bailey, and three step-children: John McDermott, Jeanne McDermott and Charles McDermott;

Scope Note

The Ferdinand Kramer papers are divided into ten series.

Series I consists of alphabetical items relating to Kramer's personal life, including correspondence, clippings and awards. This series includes several folders relating to Kramer's tennis career. Also included is Adolf Kramer's autograph collection. Series II includes the bulk of Kramer's professional correspondence from the years between 1939 and 2001.

Series III holds copies of speeches given by Kramer between the 1930s and the 1990s. Most of the speeches focus on issues of housing, urban renewal, and racial integration.

Series IV consists of alphabetical files relating to general housing issues. These files include clippings and reports, and focus on international housing development models, civil rights issues, and the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Series V consists of materials documenting Kramer's attempts to promote racial integration through the use of racial quotas in housing, and of HUD's rejection of these schemes. The series is made up primarily of correspondence, with smaller amounts of reports, legal documents, and clippings.

Series VI includes brochures, correspondence, and reports relating to Urban American, Inc., a non-profit devoted to making the public more aware of issues of urban planning. Founded in 1965 as the organizations American Planning and Civic Association and the ACTION Council for Better Cities

Series VII includes brochures, correspondence, memorandum, reports, photographs, and slides relating to Kramer's largest housing development project, Dearborn Park. Begun in the 1970s, Dearborn Park was one of the earliest attempts to revitalize Chicago's South Loop through residential development.

Series VIII consists of files relating to the University of Chicago, particularly Kramer's involvement with the University as a trustee. Series IX includes audio and video cassettes. Series X contains oversized items, including advertising mock ups and pamphlets.

Series IX includes oversized material and a videotape. Series X contains materials collected for Lois Wille's, At Home in the Loop (1997), documenting the development of the South Loop, including recordings and transcripts of interviews. Access to this material is restricted.
