Biographical Note

Ronald Lane Latimer was an editor and publisher of modern poetry known particularly for his signed, limited editions of contemporary American poets under "The Alcestis Press" imprint. The Alcestis Press of New York was a publishing venture which in 1935 and 1936 issued several volumes of modern poetry beautifully printed on rag paper, some of them bound in parchment and boxed. Latimer backed the press as an experiment in fine printing while he was editor of Alcestis, a poetry quarterly which existed briefly from October, 1934, until July, 1935. He had edited two other periodicals under the name James G. Leippert: The New Broom and Morningside (January-April, The1932) and The Lion and Crown (Fall, 1932-Winter 1933?).

Scope Note

The collections contains correspondence from authors including e.e. cummings, Ford Madox Ford, John Peale Bishop, Erskine Caldwell, Archibald MacLeish, Marianne Moore, Ezra Pound, Robert Penn Warren, William Carlos Williams and Wallace Stevens.

Most notable among the manuscripts are the letters of the poet, Wallace Stevens, which date from the period when Latimer was publishing the Alcestis editions of his and other American poets' works. Their correspondence was mainly concerned with the problems of the writing and publishing of Idea of Order and Owl's Clover. Although Stevens did not mean for his letters to be considered anything more than just that, any student of his poetry will find them illuminating and helpful when read in conjunction with the poems themselves. The content of the Stevens' letters is poetic criticism of a natural and spontaneous kind.
