Biographical Note

Karl Nickerson Llewellyn was born on May 22, 1893 in Seattle, Washington to Janet George and William H. Llewellyn. He spent his formative years in Brooklyn, New York, and upon graduation from high school studied for two years in a Realgymnasium in Schwerin, Germany.

He then enrolled at Yale University in 1911 as a classics major. In 1914 he entered the Sorbonne, in Paris, to study Latin, law, and French. Upon the outbreak of World War I he enlisted in the German army. He was wounded in battle and received the Iron Cross. Returning to Yale, he graduated magna cum laude in 1915, and was accepted into the Yale Law School where he served as editor of the Yale Law Journal. Following graduation, he taught commercial law at Yale for two years. Seeking experience outside of the classroom, Llewellyn worked for the legal department of the National City Bank of New York, and later for the law firm of Shearman and Sterling from 1920 to 1922. He returned to the Yale Law School as an Assistant Professor in 1922, and was promoted to Associate Professor in 1923.

In 1924, Llewellyn married Elizabeth Sanford, then a student at Columbia University. That same year, Llewellyn accepted a teaching position at the Columbia University Law School where he remained until 1951. During this time, Llewellyn published a number of important books including his famous introductory lectures, The Bramble Bush: On Our Law and Its Study (1931). Llewellyn gained wide recognition as a scholar of jurisprudence, and he was a major figure in the jurisprudential school of Legal Realism. He attained full professorship in 1927. Amidst his teaching duties and his extensive writing, Llewellyn found the time to collaborate with anthropologist E. Adamson Hoebel on studies of Cheyenne and Pueblo law, to serve as chairman of the Committee on Revised Uniform Sales Act and drafter of the Uniform Commercial Code (1940-1949), and accept visiting professorships at the University of Leipzig (1928-1929, 1931-1932) and Harvard Law School (1948-1949). He remarried twice during this period: first to Emma Corstvet in 1933, then to Soia Mentschikoff in 1946.

In 1950, Llewellyn accepted the Presidency of the Association of American Law Schools. The following year, Llewellyn and Soia Mentschikoff joined the faculty of the University of Chicago Law School. Llewellyn remained at the University of Chicago for the rest of his career, teaching courses primarily on jurisprudence and legal argument. He continued to work on the Uniform Commercial Code, served as Commissioner on Rights, Liberties, and Responsibilities of the American Indian in 1956, and published his book The Common Law Tradition: Deciding Appeals in 1960.

Karl Llewellyn died in Chicago on February 13, 1962.

Series VII: Sacco-Vanzetti Case

Llewellyn was a member of the Sacco-Vanzetti National League, and in 1928 he agreed to edit for the League a collection of critical analyses of the Report of the Lowell Committee. This project evolved into a book, "Sacco and Vanzetti v. the Commonwealth: An Indictment of the Workings of Our Judicial Institutions," which was unpublished in Llewellyn's lifetime. The first half of this series contains research material, notes, and drafts for the book. This is followed by correspondence and research material related to the case.

Series IX: American Indian Law

This series represents Llewellyn's interest in American Indians and his collaboration with anthropologist E. Adamson Hoebel. Llewellyn and Hoebel co-authored a book, The Cheyenne Way in 1941. They also spent several summers together in New Mexico in the mid-1940s studying Pueblo culture. During this time, Llewellyn became actively involved in Pueblo affairs, acting as unofficial legal adviser, serving as counsel in some cases, and drafting codes for Santa Anna and Santa Domingo Pueblos. Subseries 1, 2, and 5 contain material pertaining to these activities. Subseries 3, 4, and 5 represent Llewellyn's membership in the Commission on the Rights, Liberties, and Responsibilities of the American Indian, and his other projects related to American Indians.
