Historical Note

The MacLean Center for Clinical Medical Ethics was established in 1983 at the University of Chicago, and named for its founding benefactor, Dorothy J. MacLean. As the nation's first program in clinical medical ethics, the Center is active both locally, by participating in ethics consultations involving University patients and health care providers, and nationally and internationally, by supporting research and publication. A cornerstone of the Center is the medical ethics fellowship program, begun in 1981, which has trained many present-day leaders and scholars in the field worldwide.

The Center is comprised not only of the medical staff of the various departments within the University of Chicago Medical Center, but also of faculty from other University of Chicago Schools and Divisions, including the Law School, the Graduate School of Business, the Harris School of Public Policy, and the Division of Humanities and Social Sciences.

The MacLean Center's founding director, Mark Siegler, MD, is Lindy Bergman Distinguished Service Professor of Medicine and Surgery. He began his practice in general internal medicine at the University of Chicago in 1967 after graduating with honors from Princeton University. Dr. Siegler had received more than twenty-five federal and foundation research grants and has received numerous awards, including the prestigious Primo Chirnoe Prize from the University of Bologna, Italy, the oldest medical school in Europe. Dr. Siegler's academic work focuses on the shared space of ethics and medical care. His interests include the workings of the Doctor-Patient relationship, end of life care, the ethics of donor and live-donor organ transplantation and ethics consultations generally.

Scope Note

The collection documents the activities of the University of Chicago's MacLean Center for Clinical Medical Ethics and its founding Director Dr. Mark Siegler from 1984 to 2009. It is divided into seven series.

Series I, Administration is divided in two subseries. The first contains general administrative files, including minutes and notes of meetings, reports, publicity materials, general correspondence, and files relating to events promoted and hosted by the MacLean Center. The second subseries contains Dr. Mark Siegler's travel files, organized chronologically.

Series II, Affiliations documents the MacLean Center's relationships with other medical and academic institutions and with funding agencies. Of particular note is the material concerning two of the main affiliates of the Center: Ross University and the American College of Surgeons, as well as files on ethics consultations and case conferences in which the Center participated.

Series III, Research documents research and publication by the MacLean Center and associated faculty, and includes notes, manuscripts, and publications. The first subseries contains papers published by scholars affiliated with the MacLean Center, as well as material published by external researchers. The second subseries includes material concerning the center's publication of books, newsletters and brochures. The last subseries contains general research material, and is particularly rich in material on living donor transplantation, hand transplantation, the ethics of transplantation, as well as right to die, "do not resuscitate", and "end of life" ethics.

Series IV, Talks, Lectures and Conferences, contains mostly material from conferences and lectures hosted by the MacLean Center, supplemented by files from external conferences in which Center faculty participated. It is divided in three subseries. The first subseries contains a set of numbered files, dating from 1996 to 2004. The second subseries is organized alphabetically by the title or subject of the conference documented. Subseries 3 contains audio and video recordings of conferences, talks and presentations, primarily in the form of audio cassettes.

Series V, Teaching, includes files on courses taught by Dr. Mark Siegler that are closely linked to the mission of the MacLean Center. Of note are the courses on Doctor Patient Relations (DPR), Teaching Clinical Ethics (TCE), Physical Diagnosis, and the materials from the Summer Intensive courses offered by the center. The series is organized alphabetically by topic or class name.

Series VI includes materials to which access is restricted. It is divided into three subseries: Subseries 1 includes student evaluative documents, and medical and legal files that are restricted for eighty years from the latest date in each file. Subseries 2 includes budget and personnel files that are restricted for fifty years, and Subseries 3 includes administrative materials, referee reports and course evaluations that are restricted for thirty years.

Series VII contains oversized items.
