Historical Note

Minerva, a journal devoted to "matters pertaining to the social, economic, political, and administrative aspects of science, scholarship and higher learning" was founded by Edward Shils, Professor in the Committee on Social Thought and in Sociology, 1962. Shils edited the journal until his death in 1995.

Scope Note

The collection of material consists mainly of correspondence and manuscripts from the first seven volumes of Minerva, edited considerably by Edward Shils. The materials are arranged by volume and number and according to each issue's Tables of Contents. The Correspondence is generally between Professor Shils, or assistant editors, and the contributing authors. This group of letters reveals the rather informal procedure used to obtain the Articles. At times the letters present significant and scholarly insights into the status of higher education in mid-twentieth century. Also included in the collection are drafts of biographical sketches of the contributing authors, and drafts of the "Chronicle" and the "Reports and Documents" section of Minerva.
