Biographical Note

Ivan Lorraine Albright (1897-1983) is most famously known for his grotesque yet highly detailed art that embodies the “Magic Realism” (also known as “Fabulism”) art movement of the 1930s. Prior to the creation of his most famous works, he was a medical drawer stationed in France during World War I from 1918-1919. This collection is comprised of a series of sketches from his time in operating rooms and hospitals recording the injuries and X-ray scans of injured soldiers.

Albright was born to Adam Emory Albright, a painter, and Clara Wilson Albright on February 20, 1897 in North Harvey, Illinois. Albright’s twin brother Malvin would study sculpture concurrent to Ivan’s portraiture study. Unlike their father who did impressionist style landscapes and scenes for commercials, Ivan demonstrated an interest in older schools including the work of Le Greco and Dreyer Albright briefly attended Northwestern University in 1915 but left in 1916, resuming his studies studying architecture at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign for two years. His education was stalled by the outbreak of World War I.

Albright was enlisted as a soldier in American Expeditionary Forces during World War I, and stationed in Base Hospital 11 in Nantes, France. It was during this time, he witnessed firsthand the medical atrocities and recorded the injuries for study. His talent was recognized by those around him and it became his job to record the injuries and information in watercolor, pen, and sometimes chalk or charcoal. His style was noted for being crisp and detailed, yet somewhat softly rendered given the exposed tendons and organs he would paint and sketch. Albright himself had not thought of himself as an artist during this time, but the experience built a foundation for his future artistic success.

After the war, Albright became an artist whose work is prominently displayed in the Art Institute of Chicago and other museums. He graduated from the Art Institute in Chicago, specializing in painting on 1923, and later attended the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, Philadelphia, and the National Academy of Design, New York. He married Josephine Medill Patterson, and had four children: Joseph, Adam, Blandina, and Alice. Albright would spend years perfecting a single portrait, utilizing meticulous attention to detail in the form of single hair brushes for minute details like hair and lace

Albright died of a stroke in November 18, 1983, in Woodstock, Vermont. Even on his deathbed, he still continued to paint and draw with the expressive illusory realism that characterized his entire catalogue.

Scope Note

The collection contains 42 sheets with 61 drawings made by Ivan Albright while serving as a medical drawer in a military hospital in Nantes, France from September, 1918 through January, 1919. The drawings include watercolor, pen, and pencil illustrations of soldiers' wounds and transcriptions of x-rays of many of the same wounds.

Most of the drawings include an inscription identifying the soldier by name, serial number, rank, and company. In some cases, soldiers' death dates are noted. Four drawings depict German prisoners of war.

The drawings in the collection are from two sketchbooks, purchased from Albright by Senator William Benton, and later donated by Benton to the University of Chicago. The drawings were exhibited by the Renaissance Society at the University of Chicago in June, 1972. The drawings are now bound in a single volume in the order (largely chronological) in which they were displayed by the Renaissance Society, and retain the numbers assigned to them in the exhibit catalog. Four drawings, numbers 10, 13, 14, and 20, were not included in the collection when it was transferred to the University Library in 1984. Albright's handwritten title pages for the two original sketchbooks may be found as part of sheets seven and nine. The drawings are listed and displayed here in the order in which they are now bound.
