Historical Note

The Native American Educational Services (NAES) College began the Community Board Training Project (CBTP) as a 2 ½ year program in 1979. The CBTP continued through 1983. During that time, the CBTP was structured to help organizations serving the Native American community to function more efficiently. With Louis Delgado as its director, CBTP sponsored workshops which focused on training in the concepts behind community service agencies, including effective management and technical skills such as planning fiscal management, improving public relations, filing, hiring and using computer technology. During the course of its existence, the program expanded and sought to provide resource materials to community organizations and to offer them technical assistance.

Scope Note

This collection represents the activities of the Community Board Training Project (CBTP) and of Native American Educational Services (NAES) College, CBTP's sponsoring organization. The collection forms part of the archives of Native American Educational Services. Materials in the collection focus on administration, programming, and work with other organizations. It is arranged in seven series, some of which are organized into topical sections. While the collection spans the years 1978-1995, most of the material dates from 1980-1984. The collection is closely related to the records of Chicago American Indians Community Organization Conference (CAICOC), which was itself an outgrowth of CBTP.

Series I: Administrative, contains the administrative records of CBTP, including quarterly reports, student records, correspondence, information generated by the Advisory Board, evaluation of the program and training needs assessment, and a record of the Chicago American Indian Community Service Directory. This series has been arranged alphabetically and then chronologically.

Series II: Courses, contains course materials generated by the courses, workshops and seminars produced by CBTP. These courses included the American Indian Bilingual/Bicultural Teacher Training Program, courses on economics and development, finance and management, education and human services and personal competence. This series has been arranged alphabetically and then chronologically.

Series III: Financial, contains materials relating to funding and grants obtained by the organization during the course of its programming. This series also includes some accounts payable and accounts receivable materials. This series has been arranged alphabetically and then chronologically.

Series IV: Program Development, includes materials which trace the historical development of the programs. It contains a great deal of information from 1980, the first full year of the program. Some of the materials included are proposals and other developmental documents. This series has been arranged alphabetically and then chronologically.

Series V: Organizations, provides a record of some of the federal, private, educational, and financial organizations which participated in the CBTP program, including organization information, requests for technical assistance and other information about the support provided by CBTP. This includes the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the American Indian Center. This series has been arranged alphabetically and then chronologically.

Series VI: Publications, Media, and Public Relations, contains various handbooks and manuals, and articles, as well as public relation information for organizations and individuals that offered resources and support for CBTP. It has been divided into several sections. The series has been arranged alphabetically and then chronologically.

Series VII: Restricted, contains student records from courses and seminars held by CBTP which are restricted for 80 years. This series has been arranged alphabetically.

Series VIII: Oversize, contains two examples of letterheads for the Chicago American Indian Community Organization Conference.
