Historical Note

George Wells Beadle (1903-1989) was the son of Chauncey Elmer Beadle, a farmer, and Hattie Albro. Beadle was educated at the Wahoo High School in Nebraska and may have become a farmer if one of his teachers at school had not directed him towards science and persuaded him to go to the College of Agriculture at Lincoln, Nebraska. There he took up the new field of genetics and continued on to receive his Ph.D. from Cornell University.

Beadle taught biology at Harvard, Stanford and the California Institute of Technology before coming to the University of Chicago. During his time at Stanford, Beadle began his collaboration with Edward L. Tatum. Beadle and Tatum worked to establish the relationship between genes and enzymes in the bread mold Neurospora, which would earn them the 1958 Nobel Prize for Physiology or Medicine.

In 1960, Beadle was elected Chancellor of the University of Chicago and, in autumn of the same year, President of the University. Beadle served as President and Professor of biology from 1961-1968. These were turbulent years of growth and change for universities across the country. Despite calls for universities to become centers for social and political action, Beadle held the University of Chicago steady to its traditional values of research and intellectual excellence. Beadle increased the size of the faculty, raised the average salary, and doubled campus expenditures. The three year development campaign reached its goal of $160 million and many new buildings were erected on campus. Beadle led the university through student protests concerning racial segregation in university housing policy as well as Vietnam protests against university compliance with government regulations requiring reports on the academic ranking of male students for draft purposes.

While president of the University of Chicago, Beadle continued his interest in genetics and grew corn behind his house and in other plots near campus, occasionally being mistaken for a University gardener. Beadle retired from the Presidency on his 65th birthday. He accepted the directorship of the Institute for Biomedical Research of the American Medical Association which he moved to campus, where he remained to teach and continue experiments with corn for some years. He was named William E. Wrather Professor of Biology from 1969-1975 and retired to Pomona, California with his wife Muriel in 1982.

Scope Note

The records of the Office of the President, Beadle Administration, represent the activities of George Wells Beadle as President, his immediate circle of Central Administration associates (including particularly the work of Edward H. Levi as Vice-President), and personnel in the University of Chicago's divisions, departments, committees, and other administrative units. The collection thus constitutes not only documentation of the Office of the President, but a varied record of the administrative workings of the university.

While most of the documents in the collection date from the years in which Beadle served as President, material dating to earlier administrations can also be found - staff of the office often collected such material for internal research, or to provide historical or biographical context for a current topic.

The collection is divided into seven series, each of which is organized into alphabetical or chronological files. This organization, including the file headings themselves, is generally consistent with the original arrangement of files kept by staff in the Office of the President.

Series I, General Files, contains a variety of correspondence, publications, reports, minutes and other administrative material. The series is arranged alphabetically by topic. File headings include personal names, administrative units, and topical terms. Headings are sometimes very general ("Germany") while others are quite precise ("United States, House of Representatives Subcommittee on Public Health and Safety, questionnaire"). Oversize material from this series has been transferred to Series VII: Oversize Material, Box 424

Series II, Buildings, contains correspondence, blueprints, reports, publications and administrative documents pertaining to university buildings. Large blueprints from this series have been transferred to Architectural Drawings Collection in the University of Chicago Archives.

Series III, Development, contains a variety of correspondence, publications, reports, minutes and other administrative material relating to the Development campaign of the University. Oversized materials from this series have been moved to Series VII: Oversize Material, Boxes 420-423. Additional material related to Development is found in Series I, filed under "Development" or the specific names or titles associated with varying development projects.

Series IV, Invitations, is arranged chronologically. This series contains invitations sent to Beadle and other representatives of the university. The invitations are from organizations across the globe range from university anniversaries to installations of new presidents.

Series V, Trustees, is arranged alphabetically. This series contains material reporting the activities of the university's trustees and their Board, as well as material generated by trustees' work.

Series VI, Appointments and Budgets, contains budgets and letters of appointment, arranged alphabetically. Related correspondence, notes and drafts are also filed with appointments and budgets

Series VII: Oversize Material, contains large files and items transferred from Series I and II.

Most researchers will find it necessary to browse or keyword-search the inventory in order to identify files relevant to a specific subject. For example, a study of student protests might involve consultation of files headed "Demonstrations," "Selective Service," "Student draft demonstration," "Student government," "Students for a Democratic Society," "Vietnam," and so on.

Correspondence of key administrators is also distributed across the collection, some of it located under the name of the individual and some under the name of a department, school, or other institutional unit. To search for the correspondence of important administrators such as Edward H. Levi or Fairfax M. Cone, the researcher will need to be aware of which administrative responsibilities each held and locate headings in the inventory related to those roles.
