Historical Note

The Graduate School of Social Service Administration was founded in 1920, continuing the work of the Chicago School of Civics and Philanthropy under the auspices of the University of Chicago. As one of the university's professional schools, SSA offers master's and doctoral degrees preparing students for leadership in fields of social work.

Having originated in the settlement movement, SSA stressed public welfare and social insurance in its curriculum. By the 1960s SSA had become a model for innovative social work education with a national influence on social policy. The bulk of the photographs in this collection were taken during the dynamic tenures of Deans Alton Linford (1956-1969) and Harold Richman (1969-1978). This period saw increased enrollment, involvement in national social initiatives, and the construction of a new building designed by Ludwig Mies van der Rohe.

Scope Note

This collection contains photographs documenting the professional and social activities of faculty, staff, students, and alumni at the University of Chicago's School of Social Service Administration. Many of the photographs were originally taken for the SSA newsletter. Some photographs are undated or unidentified. Formats include prints, negatives and contact sheets. With a few exceptions, photographs are in black and white.

This collection is divided into two series:

Series I: People and Places, contains photographs of SSA faculty, staff, students, and alumni. It includes some photographs of campus buildings and interiors. This series spans 1935-1983.

Series II: Events and Activities, contains photographs of conferences, convocations, field work, lectures, luncheons, meetings, parties and receptions. This series spans 1953-1980.
