Biographical Note

Carl van Vechten (1880-1964) was an American photographer, writer, and graduate of the University of Chicago. A music and dance critic for the New York Times, he was also a patron for many of the most prominent members of the Harlem Renaissance, including Langston Hughes and Richard Wright. It was in the 1930s, after nearly 25 years in New York that he began taking portrait photographs. Among his subjects were Aaron Copland, Philip Johnson, , Georgia O'Keefe, Diego Rivera, Gertrude Stein, and Alfred Stieglitz (photographs of all of whom are included in the collection here). When Gertrude Stein died, van Vechten became her literary executor, bringing into print many of her unpublished works. Van Vechten's papers are now held by the Bienenke at Yale University.

Scope Note

The collection includes studio portraits and pictures of the American landscape. Each image is described and includes the date the photograph was taken.

Series I consists primarily of pictures of people affiliated with the arts, including musicians, dancers, artists, and literati. Most are individual portraits but a few show people in pairs. Included are also a number of self-portraits.

Series II includes pictures of Connecticut, Illinois, Iowa, Maine, Massachusetts, New Mexico, New Jersey, New York, and Rhode Island.
